Thinking Out Loud . . . .

This isn't a scientific study or anything close to it. Rather, it is an observation which came about after reading stories in one newspaper or another.

In the New York Post, we learn of a man who stabbed a pregnant woman three times, as she rode on a subway. That same paper continued a story about a Long Island kiddie porn collector who was arrested again, this time for having in his possession 1,000 child porn images and videos. This man talked online with more than 20 boys and girls, the youngest 7 or 8 years old.

Again in the Post, a story about two toddlers, siblings, who died minutes apart in the Bronx. They were beaten so badly that their organs failed, and they suffered internal bleeding. The only two people the police were interested in questioning were the mother of these two little ones and her boyfriend.

Closer to home, the Record reports that a man was convicted of the aggravated manslaughter of a young girl, a freshman at Kennedy High School. The girl had hoped to play professional basketball. Her crime was standing on a street in Paterson.

The Herald News shared the story of a Woodridge man who was convicted for the savage murder of a 70 year old real estate agent whom he beat and set on fire in her East Rutherford home.

The Record reported that 30 people were arrested in Paterson in a prostitution sweep.

The cold-blooded murder of the NYPD female officer as she sat in her patrol car is fresh in our minds. So is the murder of four young men who were shot by two men who were cousins. The four men were buried on a farm owned by one of them. Before they were buried, their bodies were tossed into a pig roaster, which was then set on fire with gasoline.

You might ask, what do all of the above stories have in common? Those who have committed all of these terrible crimes are citizens of the United States. It is difficult to understand how some people act the way they do or what drives them to be so cruel or violent.

We are aware that there are a number of immigrants who are undocumented and living in this great country of ours. And while generalizations should not be made, the perception of many is that those from other countries are not causing the problems our society is facing. While there are exceptions to every rule, most of them have left deplorable living situations and are here out of a desire to live in peace, in a safe and secure society.

They take jobs that many of us born in this country would not consider. They work, in most cases, for less than the minimum wage and live in less than ideal conditions.

In many cases, we find them working in the kitchens of the restaurants we frequent. They are called, at times, to take care of our lawns, and we are satisfied when we bring our car to the car wash, and our auto comes out clean. They take care of our children as nannies, and they are caretakers of our homes.

We have heard much talk about building a wall between Mexico and the United States. There was an expectation that Mexico was going to pay for this wall, and the President of Mexico doesn't believe that this is going to happen.

We were also told that only violent criminals who come into this country illegally would be deported. That doesn't seem to be the case either.

In an editorial in the June 10, 2017 edition of The New York Daily News the following was written, entitled "Let them Stay".

His story is now too typical. The threat of deportation looms over grandfather Martin Martinez, the feds having forced him to buy a one-way ticket to Mexico.

He lives just a short trip upstate in Newburgh, where he's been for 30 years. He has a wife, two adult US - born citizen children, and a U.S. born citizen grandchild. He has legal working papers and a steady job. He pays his taxes.

Two DWI's, decades ago, make him, technically, a "criminal" alien, but Martinez is not hurting anyone. He is an asset to America, not a threat.

The date of his mandated plane trip back to the country that long ago was his home? Father's Day. Before attention in this newspaper won him a three-week delay, the feds willing, will turn into a reprieve.

This is extraordinarily cruel, and terribly wasteful, and shockingly common.

It is happening to Jose Luis Sanchez-Ronquillo, a 20 year resident of Ann Arbor, Mich. and the father of two U.S. citizen children. No criminal record; deportation order.

And to Carlos Larios, a Long Branch, N.J., father of three children, two of whom are U.S. citizens, who works as a painter and drywall installer. No criminal record; deportation order.

And to Mosa Hamadeesa, a North Carolina auto repairman and father of four U.S. citizen youngsters, one of whom has a rare medical condition. No criminal record; deportation order.

They are not threats to anyone. They are members of the American community. Keep their families intact. Let them stay.

Yes, our borders need to be secure, and it is the right of our government to make sure they are.

But there are people who have been here for ten, fifteen, or twenty years, have raised families, who have worked hard and have not caused any trouble whatsoever.

As the Daily News has suggested, "They are not threats to anyone. They are members of the American community. Keep their families intact. Let them stay."

The purpose of The Young Roses is "to honor the Blessed Mother through prayer, good works, and recitation of the Rosary as well as to provide a spiritual and social community for the members." (Rosary Altar Societies stcstv.com.)

The young ladies gathered to meet, some for the first time, with the other members of their group and to report on the duties they performed for Altar care. In addition, a continuing schedule for Altar care during the summer months was established. Attending were Amber Thane, Lara Lagos, Ashley Reategui, Yenifer Panana, Anna Weil, Lisa Gambatese, and Jessica Duque.

The members of the Rosary Altar Society who attended were Janet Cozzolino, Diana Farina, Eleanor Latka, and Virginia Andreano. A special thanks to Frank Mullen for sponsoring the Brunch.

The young ladies enjoyed their shared time together as did the Rosarians who participated. Plans are now underway for future activities and events including a ceremony of Investiture this fall.
