TWO DATES AND A DASH

A saying has found a good deal of popularity in modern culture. It came about – as far as I can tell – as someone looked at a tombstone, presumably of a loved one. There appeared the date of birth and the date of death of the person resting there, with a hyphen standing innocently between them. Reflecting on this, the creator of this phrase philosophized, "Your life is made of two dates and a dash. Make the most of the dash."

The saying is charming in its own way. It could be interpreted in both a positive and a negative light. If it means, "Don't consider the first date to be an accident or the second date to be something you're just waiting around for – spend the life you've been given!", then I would agree. Of course, it could have the same meaning as that other popular phrase, "You only live once," which calls someone to experience every experience he or she can, often never committing to anything – which doesn't exactly lead to a fulfilled life. In that case, I would disagree.

Regardless, the line is a memorable one. It gives us pause to consider what a fully-lived life looks like and how use our "dash." However, as we hear the Gospel this Easter Sunday, a new and different light also shines on this phrase. In John's account of the Resurrection, Mary Magdalene reports the absence of Jesus' buried body to the apostles, still cowering from fear in the upper room. Peter and John have a footrace to the tomb to verify what she said; John, being the younger, beats Peter.

There is something captivating about the scene. We get the sense that Peter and John are both skeptical and eager to believe at the same time. But at the slightest hint that Jesus might be alive, that the story might not be over, that their hopes might not have been unfounded, they jump to their feet and they run to see if it is true.

Peter and John's "dash" to the tomb changed everything for them. That initial encounter with the resurrected glory of Jesus marked a new beginning. The very first steps of the new life that they had begun were taken at a sprint. If, according to the popular saying, our entire life is summed up in a "dash," then Peter and John are the first ones to prove the saying true. Their life became entirely caught up with the discovery they made at the end of that run on the first Easter morning – it defined them, motivated them, inspired them, and strengthened them for the rest of their lives. They show us that what it means to "make the most of the dash" is to dash to the empty tomb of Christ, to believe, and to live the new life his Resurrection brings.

As you strive to "make the most of the dash" between your date of birth and date of death, how do you define what a truly fulfilled life means? Peter and John's "dash" teaches us that true fulfillment means being filled with the overwhelming glory of the resurrected life of Jesus Christ that no tomb could contain or withhold.
