Questions for the week of July 20th.

Adults: How do you provide "good soil" for the faith of others to grow?

Children: What are you doing to help the seeds of your faith grow each day?

Peter's Pence Collection

Next week our diocese will take up th Peter's Pence Collection, which provides the Holy Father with funds he needs to carry out his charitable works around the world. The proceeds benefit the most disadvantaged: victims of war, oppression, and disasters. Join our Holy Father as a witness of charity to those who are suffering.

Nurses' Note:

Health tips: Soak up the sun, safely: Even broad-spectrum formulas with high SPFs need to be reapplied — plus, other must-know sun-smart info.

Sunscreen labels can be confusing. What's the difference between water-resistant and sweat-resistant? Is a product with an SPF of 45 really that much better than one that's SPF 25? Does sunscreen expire? First, the numbers: The SPF rating refers to how much protection a particular product offers against UVB (burning) rays. An SPF 15 will filter out about 93 percent of UVB rays. A product with SPF 30 (the minimum rating recommended by the American Academy of Dermatology) will filter out 97 percent, and SPF 50 will filter 98 percent. If you're fair-skinned or have a history of skin cancer, those incremental differences may matter. Make sure that any product you use is "broad-spectrum" so it will also protect against UVA rays, the type that cause signs of aging. Our favorite is micronized zinc. It doesn't show, but it does physically block UVA, B and C. And no matter what strength or formula you use, it must be reapplied every two hours and after swimming or vigorous sweating. You also need to use more sunscreen than you might think. Most people apply less than half the recommended one ounce (enough to fill a shot glass). While spray sunscreens may seem more convenient, they can make it difficult to tell if you've adequately covered your skin, and there is also a risk of accidental inhalation. Never spray sunscreen around your face or mouth. Spray sunscreen into your hands first, and then apply it to your face. As for the issue of expiration, the Food and Drug Administration requires that sunscreens retain their original strength for at least three years, so it's okay to use up last summer's leftovers before you purchase new. On the other hand, not all sunscreens have expiration dates on the label, so if you're not sure how old the sunscreen is, toss it. Except you never have to toss that micronized zinc. Did we say it was our fave? http://www.clevelandclinicwellness.com
