They set out at once and returned to Jerusalem where they found gathered together the eleven and those with them who were saying, "The Lord has truly been raised and has appeared to Simon!"

Third Sunday of Easter

Acts 2:14, 22-23: The readings of this third Sunday of Easter in the entire three-year cycle are from these discourses. Our reading is part of Peter's speech on Pentecost day. His main point in our reading is that the resurrection is the identifying sign of Jesus' Messiahship. He relates the messianic prophecies to the life of Jesus. He shows that Jesus is the successor of David.

The reading presents us with one of Peter's discourses. The first verse shows Peter as the spokesperson of the apostles. Briefly Peter outlines Jesus' career; how He worked miracles as all know, but then He was killed. God allowed this because it was part of his plan in the salvation of mankind. But now He is risen.

Next Peter quotes from Psalm 16 where David speaks of "seeing the Lord always, dwelling in hope, being liberated from decay and corruption." Peter says that this cannot be referring to David since he is dead. So, David was speaking about his successor. Jesus died, but rose, He never saw corruption. Peter testifies that they (apostles) saw Him after the resurrection. He concludes that Jesus must be the Messiah that David was talking about.

1 Peter 1:17-21: The writer closely looks at the cost of salvation and the responsibility following it. He starts by telling us what it means to call God "Father." From the reading, it looks like calling God Father can be compared to calling him to act as a disciplinarian. We have to keep in mind that a good Father shows no partiality among his children. He is fair to all. The redemption through Christ was determined from the very beginning.

Luke 24:13-35: Jesus' encounter with the disciples on their way to Emmaus. Three days after the death of Jesus, some of the disciples had lost hope and thought of going back to their former ways of life, or they were going back home after the celebration of the Passover. Others were confused because they did not know what to do. Two of the disciples decided to go back to their former life in Emmaus. These two disciples are not named.

The reading is rich in theological themes. The events happened on the very day of the resurrection (v.13), exactly three days after Jesus had been put to death (v.21). The tomb had been found empty by the women. Peter and the 'beloved disciple' had also proved this.

So, as the two were on the road, a stranger joined them. He asked what they were talking about, and then, using the Old Testament references, the stranger explained to the two about the prophecies. As the stranger was interpreting the Scriptures, they approached their destination in the evening. The stranger seemed to be continuing with his journey. The two asked him "Stay with us. It is evening." He obliged and while in the house, he "took bread, blessed and gave it to them." At that time, they realized it was Jesus, but He had vanished from their sight. On the way, He had shown that His death and resurrection were very much in accord with the Old Testament.

The story shows the early Christian worship format: tell the story, interpret it, break the bread. Clearly this narrative has Eucharistic tones (Luke 22:19). Some of the important lessons from the reading are: Glory comes by way of suffering; remembering the traditions is not enough; Tradition needs interpretation in a new way; we come to know Christ through the breaking of bread.

We are currently seeking 5-6 volunteers to help form our Stewardship Committee. Stewardship is a form of prayer, service and sharing, all aiming at "revitalizing and renewing of the faith community. The stewardship committee collaborates with the finance and pastoral councils, and reaches out to all parishioners according to the needs.

Some duties of the Stewardship Committee might include welcoming new families to the parish, assisting to prepare for various celebrations (whether social or liturgical), helping the parish staff in stuffing bulletins, sending out cards to parishioners who are sick, grieving etc., and welcoming, assisting or facilitating visiting priests. If you are interested, please contact the parish office.

For those who are wondering, the Diocese of Green Bay has not yet granted permission to distribute both Species of the Eucharist (Consecrated Hosts and Consecrated wine). Once they do, we will resume having both Species at Mass.
