Union with the Person of Christ

Children being prepared for First Communion are told that they are to receive our Lord, present under the appearances of bread; the hymns and prayers they learn speak of a friend coming to visit them; the catechism class is oriented towards making vivid for them the fact that the person of Christ is contained in the sacrament.... The Christian mind grasps that the meaning behind the Eucharist is that it unites us to the person of Christ.... Christ gave his body and his blood to the Church in the Blessed Eucharist before his bodily presence was removed from earth to the heavenly sanctuary. He gave it under the appearance of bread and wine, one containing the flesh, the other the blood, because he was leaving his body with the Church as something that would be used in a community meal commemorating his death. It had to be given under the form of nourishment, food and drink....

Christ's body is the foundational sacrament of the mystery of redemption. Crucified and glorified, it is the supreme visible manifestation of the love of the Blessed Trinity for men: God so loved the world as to give his Only begotten Son. At the same time the most sublime act of creation, the act of charity with which man responds to the love of the Trinity, and the act of worship which is the creature's first duty to God, are bound up inextricably with what happened to the body of Christ. All the human love of Christ for his Father and for men and all the intensity of his perfect worship were concentrated on the hour of Calvary; they found their divinely ordained proof in that act of sacrifice made visible in the broken body and the shed blood.

The divine love of the Blessed Trinity and the human love of the heart of Jesus now reach out to individual men and women to awaken in them an echo of the love of Christ for the Father; and the body and blood, now restored and glorified, are still the instrument of his redemptive love. From this body flows the Holy Spirit sent by the Father and the Son into Christians, drawing them into the life of the Blessed Trinity by grace. From this body the Spirit is sent too into the visible functions of the Church, making them life-giving. At the center of Christianity is the body of Christ. It is the vehicle of expression for Christ's and God's redemptive love; and it is the visible instrument united to God through which all graces are given. United with Christ inwardly, loving the Father with him, Christians share with him one visible sign of their common love.
