The Dignity and Power of the Mother of God

Divine motherhood is an immense power in the world of grace, the greatest power after the redemptive power of Christ. You are beautiful, O my love, sweet and comely as Jerusalem, terrible as an army set in array (Sgs 6:4). These words, expressing at the same time the greatest human endearment and an overwhelming sense of irresistible warlike power, have been always applied to the blessed Mother of God by the Christian liturgy.

The idea of immense power in connection with divine motherhood is distinctly a most Catholic frame of mind. Nothing is more natural to us than to give the Mother of God those very titles which we give to God our Redeemer: Salve, Regina, Mater misericordiae, vita, dulcedo, et spes nostra. We call her the Mother of mercy, we call her life, we call her sweetness, we call her our hope. We know that Christ is to us the Author of mercy, that he is to us Life, Sweetness and Hope in a higher—in an infinitely higher—sense than Mary is.... Christ's redemption, being the act of God, is the ultimate cause and source of all grace.... But we say that in Mary there is something which is truly infinite: her dignity as the Mother of God. Saint Albert the Great has the following delightful phrase in a commentary on the Annunciation portion of the Gospel. Rendered freely, the passage says that "Mary's Son gives infinitude to his Mother's excellency, there being also in the tree that produces the fruit some of that infinite perfection that belongs properly to the fruit."

In practice the Catholic Church looks upon the Mother of God as being an unbounded power in the realm of grace; in virtue of her divine motherhood Mary is simply the vastest, the most efficient, the most universal supernatural power in heaven and on earth, outside the three divine Persons.
