Dear St. Andrew Parish Community,

It was such an honor to come back home once again, and feel the warmth of your ever-constant welcome during the Christmas break. The few weeks I spent at home were a marvelous reminder of just how gracious God has been to our parish and how outstanding the people of St. Andrew are. I thank you. Thank you also for all the Christmas and New Year wishes. Thank you for the financial support you have rendered my brother seminarians and I. Thank you in a special way for all of your prayers. I hold all you have done ever in my heart, and I thank God always for them and for you.

For those who may be wondering, life here at the seminary is progressing very well. Through His grace, I am surprisingly already in the second semester of my first year of Theology. I am learning a lot and developing well in various dimensions of formation. One of my main goals is to more fully conform myself to Christ. In little ways, I can see how the Lord has been gradually leading me towards that. Thanks be to God. Thanks to you also for your prayers and for all your support. As you surely already know, every vocation that blossoms is the fruit of the fervent prayers of the faithful lifted up like incense before the throne of God. So, thank you immensely once again for all you have done for me. May God bless and keep St. Andrew Parish.

+In Christ

Seminarian,

Pius Nsoh-Awasom Jr.

Q. I was raised Catholic, but have been an Evangelical Bible Christian for the last 35 years. I am questioning where I belong and re-thinking Catholicism because of Catholic radio. I went to Mass a few weeks ago, and I can't help but feel like there is no heartfelt participation by the congregation and even the priest. There was very little singing by the people and the sermon from the priest was pretty bland. I almost want to come back to my upbringing, but not sure if I can get past this stumbling block. I have seen and felt the enthusiasm in my bible church and feel like this is something I would have to give up to come back to Catholicism. Can you help me with this? More than anything, I want sincerity in my worship.

A. My question to you is: Which is more important, the way other people react to the truth, or the truth itself? Are there Catholics who just go through the motions at Mass and who, in general, just go through the motions of being Christian? Absolutely. Are there members of the clergy who don't properly instruct their people and give bland and fairly meaningless homilies? Absolutely. Are there parishes where the singing leaves a whole lot to be desired? Absolutely. But, again, do you allow those who don't appreciate the priceless treasure they have right in front of them to keep you away from that treasure? Would you have allowed the reactions of the twelve apostles on Holy Thursday to keep you away from Christ? After all, one of them betrayed Him, one of them denied Him, and 9 of the other 10 abandoned Him. Would you have said, "Well, if that's how those closest to Him react, then I don't want to have anything to do with Him?" Should the sincerity of worship, or the seeming lack thereof, be the determining factor in what you believe to be true? Mormons worship very sincerely, and they have some incredible singing. Muslims are very sincere in their worship...they stop, wherever they are, five times a day to hit their knees and pray. The trouble is, sincerity has nothing to do with determining truth. People can be very sincere in their worship, and still be very sincerely wrong in their beliefs. Also, you need to consider that Catholics, in general, are not as emotional in their worship service as are Protestants. Why not? Because we don't need to be. Now, that's not to say that we shouldn't have good homilies and more participation in the singing and the prayers and such, but our worship service is not about making us feel good, or putting us on an emotional high, it's about worshipping God. The God Who is physically present in the Eucharist - Body, Blood, Soul, and Divinity - in a way that He is not present in any Protestant congregation. And, while it is indeed possible that at any particular parish there is a lack of "heartfelt participation," it is also possible that the participation which on the surface doesn't appear to be heartfelt, is actually much more heartfelt and much more intimate than at other churches...it simply isn't expressed in an outward manner. Catholics have a lot we can learn from our Protestant brothers and sisters - particularly in the areas of fellowshipping, Bible reading, preaching, singing, and so on. However, we have something that no Protestant church has - the fullness of the truth as given to us by Jesus Christ. We have the Eucharist and the other Sacraments. We have the Priesthood, the Pope, the Magisterium, and so much more. So, again, the question you need to consider is whether the way people react to the truth is more important to you than the truth itself. https://www.biblechristiansociety.com/apologetics/two_minute#4) For any questions, or about current apologetics classes, call/text Barbara Furnari @ 816-878-2838, FurnariFlock@aol.com
