FIRST SUNDAY OF LENT

"On the same day, January 20
SEBASTIAN, MARTYR

Saint Sebastian died a martyr at Rome in the beginning of the Diocletian persecution. From antiquity the faithful have venerated his tomb on the Appian Way ad Catacumbas.

From the common of one martyr, 1707.

Office of Readings
SECOND READING

From an exposition of psalm 118 by Saint Ambrose, bishop
(Cap. 20, 43-45. 48: CSEL 62, 466-468)

Faithful witnessing to Christ

To enter the kingdom of God we must endure many tribulations. If there are many persecutions, there are many testings; where there are many crowns of victory, there are many trials of strength. It is then to your advantage if there are many persecutors; among many persecutions you may more easily find a path to victory.

Take the example of the martyr Sebastian, whose birthday in glory we celebrate today. He was a native of Milan. At a time when persecution either had ceased or had not yet begun or was of a milder kind, he realized that there was only slight, if any, opportunity for suffering. He set out for Rome, where bitter persecutions were raging because of the fervor of the Christians. There he endured suffering; there he gained his crown. He went to the city as a stranger and there established a home of undying glory. If there had been only one persecutor, he would not have gained a martyr's crown.

The persecutors who were visible are not the only ones. There are also invisible persecutors, much greater in number. This is more serious. Like a king bent on persecution, sending orders to persecute to his many agents, and establishing different persecutors in each city or province, the devil directs his many servants in their work of persecution, whether in public or in the souls of individuals. Of this kind of persecution Scripture says: All who wish to live a holy life in Christ Jesus suffer persecution. "All" suffer persecution; there is no exception. Who can claim exemption if the Lord himself endured the testing of persecution? How many there are today who are secret martyrs for Christ, giving testimony to Jesus as Lord! The Apostle knew this kind of martyrdom, this faithful witnessing to Christ; he said: This is our boast, the testimony of our conscience.""

THOUGHTS FROM FATHER BILL

As a priest I often have parishioners coming to me with their heavy troubles, which have the intensity of a persecution. Predictably they often wonder why does God allow this to happen to me and my family. The agony of a stillborn baby or a child being beat up in school are in the list of endless possibilities. The virus out of China has killed nearly a 1,000 so far, infected vast amounts more, and has put a crimp in the economy. These predicaments strike each of us personally or a loved one at intermittent scales. From my perspective all of these assaults, be it human weakness or a culture at diverse roads with the teachings of God, are reminders of the temporality of life and how our true destiny is Heaven. Kenny is a waiter at IHOP or the International House of Pancakes. I see him at least once a week. As a devout Christian he always reminds me of these spiritual realities. God bless him, you, and our parish. Father Bill
