God is love

The question you and I face is this: "Do we give God what's left over after we've taken care of everything else?" Or do we give God what we're living for? We have much, and we can give God much. We can give God our trust, our reliance upon Him, our dependence upon Him. We can make our purposes God's purposes, and we can make God's purposes our purposes. Caring for the ones you love, your wife, your husband, and your children is giving your life to God. Providing for the happiness of others is giving your life to God. Working for peace, justice and fairness in our world, and many other efforts is, in fact, giving your life over into God's care. Let's be clear about it. God isn't interested in your money. He has all of the riches He will ever need. No, God wants more than your money. God wants YOU. He wants your daily life. He wants to be what you depend on each day. He wants to be what you live on. Our giving to God is only giving Him back what's already His in the first place. But our giving God our hearts? Ah, that's quite something else! The gift of your heart is what He's looking for. It's our gift to Him each time we're at Mass. And when we gift Him with our love, when we give Him our hearts and our lives, our interests and desires, what He will give back to us cannot be measured.

Parishioners should have received this week or will be receiving next week a mailer containing (2) two raffle tickets and information on the various ways to return your tickets. If you cannot afford to purchase both tickets perhaps you could sell the second ticket to your family or friends.
