THE PASTOR'S PEN

Greetings in Christ Jesus!

Most of us get irritated and give way to anger over all kinds of issues and so we imagine God must be like this too. The Bible apparently agrees. God can sometimes be angry.

But there is a great difference between human anger and divine anger. Human anger is often the result of feeling frustrated or impotent and it is directed at those whom we decide to blame, at other human beings, or perhaps at God himself.

But divine anger is altogether different. God is never frustrated. Moreover, he never wavers in his infinite love and mercy. So, God's anger is just another dimension of his love for us.

In today's gospel Jesus rebukes an unclean spirit. He has two reasons to be angry with this demon. First, the man possessed is clearly suffering. Secondly, the demon is being a nuisance.

He is making a noise and disturbing Jesus' teaching. With their superior intellect the demons have guessed from Jesus' behavior that they are dealing with the power of God.

And so, they are fearful because the mere presence of God in Jesus causes them pain, a reminder of their eternal loss. Unlike us they cannot repent. And so they accuse Jesus of wanting to destroy them.

Jesus simply wants to end this demon's harmful activity and so with a few words he sets the man free. The real authority of Christ is shown in this act of liberation. Jesus's words are authoritative.

They don't just sound authoritative, they are effective. The crowd is impressed. But the gospel leaves us with an unsettling thought. The crowd may be impressed but like so many people they are still 'making up their minds'.

They start asking each other what it all means. Asking what it's all about is a favorite pastime of human beings who don't want to commit, 'What's it all about?' The demon who has just been put to flight is in no doubt at all.

Fr. Maschio.
