SCRIPTURE INSIGHTS

Today's Gospel passage is situated within an event occurring in John 10:22-42. The verses just prior to today's Gospel note that the account occurs in the Temple area on the Portico of Solomon in winter during the Feast of Dedication (John 10:22-23), known today as Hanukkah. Jesus focuses first on his role as the messiah then climaxes in his self-revelation as the Son of God. In this brief discourse, we learn it is not sufficient to hear the shepherd's voice; true disciples follow it. The reward is life in union in this relationship. We can never be snatched from God's hands. This life, however, begins with belonging to God here and now. It continues even as we pass from this world into God's eternal presence.

Solomon's portico, on the eastern face of the temple, is a fitting backdrop for this discourse occurring during the festival commemorating Judaism's resistance to blasphemy, idolatry, and apostasy. Speculation about Jesus' messiahship has been in the air for some time. Jesus intensifies the imagery of his relationship with God as Son to the Father. He draws his sheep to him and, in so doing, presses far beyond both his interrogators' messianic expectations and comfort level by presenting his oneness with God.

"The Father and I are one" (10:30) articulates a familiar truth for us, but first-century Jewish people found it difficult. One teaching they understood unambiguously was that God is one (Deuteronomy 6:4). When Jesus spoke of "the Father and I," it seemed like two, but this is the stunning beauty of God's gift of Jesus to the world. The Son is indeed one with the Father in love and pastoral care for all who are open to their one voice.

- ◆ How do you see Jesus as caring for you in union with the Father and the Holy Spirit?
- ◆ In Acts, the apostles stand up to the powerful. How might you rise to such a challenge?
- ◆ John follows the psalmist in speaking of God's enduring mercy and faithfulness. Do you envision God and/or Christ as Shepherd? If not, how might it?
