We Pray

Our winter Ordinary Time Liturgies are simpler than those of the Christmas Season with all its flowers, lights, drums, and tambourines. Our response to the Hebrew Scriptures is Psalm 25: "To you, O God, I lift up my soul; lift up my spirit to my Lord." We sing of God's faithfulness, friendship, and wisdom. The Gospel acclamation is the beautifully noble Celtic Alleluia. We gather at the Lord's Table and we proclaim our mystery, "When we eat this Bread and drink this Cup, we proclaim your Death, O Lord, until you come again." Our Eucharist compels us to enter into the Cross, the Tomb, the Deaths of this world as witnesses to the life giving presence of Christ among us all.

Lent

Lent is the season of endings becoming beginnings. It mirrors and prepares us to celebrate the mystery of the Cross, where the end of mortal life becomes the beginning of eternal life. The readings inspire us to take up again and more firmly the practice of making ends meet by saying “no” in order to be free to make new beginnings by saying “yes.” That is the essential dynamic of balanced Lenten asceticism.

The Lectionary (the Readings for Mass) is built in counterpoint. On the one hand, the Sunday readings unfold facets of the Paschal Mystery we prepare to celebrate and embrace. Between sin and redemption lies a long history of temptation, epitomized here in the confrontation between Jesus and the Tempter. Our redemption costs the sacrifice of the beloved Son in whom burns the Fire of God. Among the conflicting voices of good and evil, we are charged to listen to this chosen Messiah and follow him through law and Cross into the glory of God. Exile to the land of sin and death calls out for deliverance given through the Cross. The Gospels reveal Jesus in dialogue with many people. Jesus challenges preconceived notions of religion, God, power, and belonging. Jesus refreshes us with real love and honest faith. Liberation through the new covenant made in Christ’s blood forges a new people of God, fed and strengthened by the Eucharist (the risen Christ) and thus made responsible to turn and feed the world. The resurrection that awaits, reaching back from Easter future, seizes us and transforms us into disciples and servants in service of all those God loves. Palm Sunday returns to what lies between now and then: the journey of Jesus from acclaim to desolation through suffering and death. There Christ’s ultimate “no” to the voices of evil, clamoring at him through human weakness (the unfaithful disciples) and cruelty (the judges, torturers, and executioners) becomes the ultimate “yes” to love too deep and far-reaching for us to understand. What appears to be the final end becomes in fact the greatest of beginnings.

In counterpoint to the Sunday readings, the weekday selections entwine our own everyday story with the sweeping story of Christ. Where the Sunday readings provide the model and the “why,” the weekday readings supply the basic “how” and “what.” The traditional Lenten practices of prayer, fasting, and almsgiving are given flesh, and a very enriched flesh at that, through Old and New Testament stories and exhortations. Fasting extends from food to material goods. Physical fasting strengthens us to abstain from more difficult “noes”: ceasing to treat others in ways that fail to reflect the holiness of God, in whose image we were made to live in love. Further, it requires us to refuse bias and prejudice, narrow expectations and judgements, all that confines us in a world too small for God’s ways. This recurring theme is punctuated with reminders of our covenant identity of God’s startling mercies, and of the hope that lies before us. Jesus’ renunciation of life on the Cross is the greatest icon of human fasting.

However, “no” without “yes” is barren. Through abstaining from ways of eating, accumulation, thinking, and doing, we are drawn forward into ways of feeding others, giving to others, making judgments and acting on the love we see in God’s covenant law, old and new, and in the life and death of Jesus. Here we are urged to take up the works of justice and mercy which are the larger definition of almsgiving. Perhaps the most challenging of mercy’s works is the forgiveness of us. Our underlying “yes” is “yes” to living in God’s image in all our relationships with family, friends and strangers alike.

The illusion that self is source and center is the root of all sin. We are reminded on the contrary that neither “yes” nor “no” is possible without prayer, lest our motives and goals dwindle into petty pride and selfishness. Besides specific instructions regarding prayer, the reading offer models, including the Our Father and numerous prayers for forgiveness.

Through all these themes are woven repeated references to the imagery of the great Easter sacraments of life for which we prepare: fire and light, water, bread, and oil, as well as the essentials of word and community. Readied by God, we become prepared to live as People of the Creed, givers of life for the whole world.

OUR LITURGIES put into prayerful reflection and celebration this Season of Lent. Curly and pussy willow branches grace the gathering space as a sign of a new springtime; violets and purples reflect our yearning for conversion; the Cross in our sanctuary beckons us to follow. Our Mass is simpler and serene. Liturgy is really a conversation between God and his people. The Word is spoken and dwells among us. Our music and prayer inspires us, challenges us, reassures us, places before us the demands of discipleship, and caresses us with love as God speaks tenderly yet boldly and we respond as we come to faith. We pay attention more devoutly; perhaps together we will listen and be converted again...reformed as God’s Holy People. We begin quietly and call out as we have for centuries, confident in the mercy of God, with the ancient Greek, “Kyrie eleison, Christe eleison”. Our response to the Hebrew Scripture is Psalm 51, “Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me.”

We tell of God’s amazing, soaring heights of gracious healing offered to all. The Gospel is proclaimed without any Alleluias (what a contrast to Easter’s exuberance). The ancient stories of encounters with Christ become our stories. As we gather around the Lord’s Table we ask God to free us from apathy, complacency, fear, evil, and stubbornness that we truly hear God’s life changing summons to discipleship. Because of Jesus’ love we will never be the same. We proclaim how God loves us through the Cross into the Resurrection...through Jesus’ death into new life. And so we give thanks and seek to become reconcilers in our world. We celebrate Communion with Christ and with one another. We remember that we belong to God and to each other; even in silence God speaks to us, calling us beyond any fear or doubt. Within our heart, God’s Word speaks to us of home, freedom, and life. After this Holy Communion we sing supportively as a bonded community. We go forth believing evermore that we are sent out in the name of God as a people on a conversion pilgrimage...acting with justice, loving tenderly, serving all people, and walking humbly with God and each other. We leave our worship in quiet reflection to live faithfully every day.
