Motivating Young People to Join Law Enforcement

“People sleep peacefully in their beds at night only because rough men stand ready to do violence on their behalf” (Wyllie). Police officers risk their lives daily to protect others, and communities rely on them for security. It is crucial that young adults consider joining law enforcement because of the vital role that police officers have in our nation. Young people can be encouraged to enter the profession of law enforcement by remembering the importance of their duties in our lives, wanting to change the negative connotation that is being associated with law enforcement today, and educating themselves on the jobs of police officers.

Remembering the importance of their duties to our nation can inspire young people to join the profession of law enforcement. Police officers put their lives on the line to defend citizens and possessions. In 2021, 502 officers lost their lives while on duty (“2021”). If the value of police officers is emphasized, young adults may feel more inclined toward becoming one.

Another influence that could motivate youth to consider the career of law enforcement is the negative connotation that many link the police to. Young people could be inspired to improve the bad reputation that police officers are correlated with. Nowadays, police officers are described as cruel, unjust, and brutal. Whether or not young adults agree with this statement, all can agree that this view of the police should be improved. Taking this point into account may persuade some to become a member of law enforcement.

By educating themselves on the jobs of police officers, young people may feel more inclined to choose that career path. Police officers have jobs that come with a number of responsibilities, including supervising traffic, watching over an area, answering urgent calls, jailing perpetrators, and more (Dowd). Considering the various obligations that police officers have can help youth feel a greater sense of appreciation. This recognition can influence young adults' decisions to be officers.

Recognizing the notability of police officers' roles in our lives, desiring a revision in how police officers are perceived, and learning more about their tasks can promote joining the career of law enforcement. Police officers help communities operate well and ultimately provide a sense of safety. They handle disorder and maintain peace. "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called children of God" ("Matthew 5:9 NABRE - - Bible Gateway").
