We are on a journey. Today's readings call our attention to our "ongoing" journey.

In the first reading from the first book of Kings, the journey continues when Elijah passes on his prophetic task to Elisha to carry on and to be the voice of God to the people of Israel. In the second reading from Paul's letter to the Galatians, Paul speaks of our continuing struggle to be truly free, a struggle common to all mankind. Paul reminds us to work for and preserve our freedom in Christ, which comes from God, and whose achievement is also a journey for us to find and preserve.

In the Gospel reading from St. Luke, Jesus begins his journey to Jerusalem, the heart and soul of Israel, to meet his death and from which he will rise again. He journeys from Galilee to Jerusalem in fulfillment of his Father's will and plan for him.

The readings help us in our journey of faith which requires that we move out of our comfort zones and our attachments, find freedom and the will of God in our lives. We journey to free ourselves of whatever makes us unable to respond generously and freely the Lord.

Jesus must have felt fear and anxiety as he journeyed to Jerusalem and Calvary. We see this fear and anxiety as he prayed to the Father and agonized in the Garden before he was arrested by the Jews. Yet he trusted in his Father's care and love for him.

The Lord invites us to journey with him and to live our lives confident in his trust and love, truly free in Christ. In doing so, we proclaim that God's kingdom is lived in our lives.
