IVF embryo deaths surpass number of babies killed annually by abortion, report shows

Calvin Freiburger, (LifeSiteNews, 11/10/25) — The annual number of embryonic human beings killed in the in vitro fertilization (IVF) process now substantially exceeds the number of babies killed yearly by abortion, says an alarming report.

According to the Society for Assisted Reproductive Technology's (SART's) most recent annual report on the use of IVF and similar technologies, 2023 saw the number of babies born through IVF rise to 95,860 in the U.S. (2.6 percent of all births) and the total number of reported IVF cycles performed rise to 432,641.

SART and its sister entity American Society for Reproductive Medicine (ASRM) hail the news as a positive development for infertile couples, but Live Action ran the numbers based on the averages of “excess” embryos created and discarded by the process, and estimated that a staggering “1,946,884 embryos did not survive to be implanted, and another 1,759,664 were either frozen, destroyed, donated to research, or released for embryo adoption.”

By contrast, the pro-abortion Guttmacher Institute puts the number of abortions in 2023 at 1,037,880 (the true number would be higher due to deficiencies in abortion data collection, but not to an extent that would close the gap between it and the IVF numbers).

“The mere fact that half of the IVF embryos won’t make it beyond the initial first steps after fertilization, including the health screening, should be enough to prove that IVF is not about creating life but about controlling it, determining which lives are accepted as valuable and worthy and which are automatically destroyed for being deemed ‘subpar,’” Live Action’s Nancy Flanders opined.

The IVF process is gravely unethical, as it entails the conscious creation of scores of “excess” embryonic humans only to be killed and human lives being treated like commodities to be bartered over. It has been estimated that more than a million embryos are frozen in storage in the United States after IVF, and that as many as 93 percent of all embryos created through IVF are eventually destroyed. A 2019 NBC News profile of Florida fertility doctor Craig Sweet acknowledged that his practice has discarded or abandoned approximately a third of the embryos it places in cold storage.

Yet the political lines of the issue were blurred last year after the Alabama Supreme Court ruled that frozen embryos qualified as children in a wrongful death suit, thrusting the issue into the national spotlight. Most national Republicans rushed to declare their support for IVF (with just a handful of exceptions). Leading the charge was President Donald Trump, who cast himself as a “leader on fertilization” and even promised to enact a new federal entitlement to IVF, whether through direct subsidy or insurance mandate (though he also suggested he would support religious exemptions to the latter).

Shortly after his return to the presidency, Trump signed an executive order directing his administration to brainstorm administrative action and policy recommendations to strengthen IVF “access” and “affordability,” though not yet committing to a specific policy. In May, the White House was preparing a report on ways to combat infertility, and as part of those discussions is weighing a slate of policy ideas, including adding IVF coverage to U.S. military health insurance, declaring IVF an “essential health benefit” that must be covered under the Affordable Care Act (Obamacare), and calling on Congress to enact a federal mandate for private insurance companies to cover IVF.

The White House eventually backed away from the idea of mandating IVF but said it still wanted to find a way to deliver on Trump’s campaign pledge. Last month, Trump announced he had struck a deal to reduce IVF costs and increase IVF “access” by (among other actions on lower prices for fertility drugs) by creating a new benefit option specifically covering IVF and other fertility treatments for employers to offer their employees.

U.S. Secretary of Health & Human Services (HHS) Robert F. Kennedy Jr. told Trump that he would “get into heaven” thanks to the move.

*Fr. Campbell: Let us pray that President Trump be open to the truth of the grave immorality of IVF!

Monday Dec. 8, Solemnity of the Immaculate Conception: Holy Day of Obligation

Mass Times:
Mt. Carmel: 8am, 12 noon
(Latin), 5:30pm
St. Therese: 8am & 7pm

Change in Saturday Evening Mass time at St. Therese to 5:15pm begin- ning Dec. 27 – last Saturday in DeceMBER: With Jan Slyster retiring as organist & choir director after decades of faithful service (BIG THANKS!), Christopher Dill will become our new organist/choir director. But because he plays organ at the 4pm Mass at Mt. Carmel (he is the organist/choir director there as well), we must permanently change the Saturday afternoon Mass from 4pm to 5:15pm at St. Therese. The Sunday Masses at St. Therese will remain the same, and Christopher will play organ at the 8:30am Sunday Mass. The Sunday 10:30am Mass at St. Therese will normally be a “low Mass” – i.e., with no organ, but with simple chants led by the priest (like the 7am Mass at Mt. Carmel); but we hope to have an organist on some Sundays when available.
