The Art of Visualizing, Part IDear family of St Brendan & St George

In the feast of the Ascension, let's talk about the value of visualizing the future. If you want to achieve something small or big in your life, you must have a vision of what you want. Stephen R. Covey calls this "beginning with an end in mind": "Beginning with an end in mind means beginning with a clear understanding of your destiny. It means knowing where you are going so that you can better understand where you are, and always take the right steps in the right direction."

Changes in history, and revolutions in knowledge and science, have depended almost entirely on knowing how to see beyond. The ability to see beyond the rhythm passes time. Nietzsche said of himself: "I, like Zarathustra, was ahead of time."

Psychologists recommend exercising the art of projecting. Precisely because a vision guides us, it helps us better focus on what we want to achieve and overcome the hostilities that could eventually appear.

Visualization is the best way to play with and adjust to the time. If the present is marked by a future reality that you can visualize, you learn to make the most of your ability and invest time. On the other hand, if you do not have a horizon, the path will be regularly interrupted by your barriers. To paraphrase the philosopher Seneca: When a ship knows where it is going, any wind is favorable to it.

Let us do some exercise. I challenge you to ask yourself these questions to see how it turns out. How do you see yourself in ten years? When you think about the future, what do you see? Take advantage and move forward.

According to the psychologist Erich Fromm, "Life has an intimate dynamism peculiar to it; it tends to extend, live, and express itself." In other words, the natural thing in life is change. Whether you like it or not, its process does not stop. The vital spirit advances; if you don't, you fall behind.

May God bless you always!

Fr Milton

El Arte de visualizar, Parte IQuerida Familia de St Brendan & St George,

En la fiesta de las Asension, hablemos del valor de visualizar el futuro. Si quieres lograr algo pequeño o grande en tu vida, debes tener una visión de lo que quieres. Stephen R. Covey llama a esto "comenzar con un final en mente": "Comenzar con un final en mente significa comenzar con una comprensión clara de tu destino. Significa saber a dónde vas para que puedas entender mejor dónde estás y siempre dar los pasos correctos en la dirección correcta".

Los cambios en la historia, y las revoluciones en el conocimiento y la ciencia, han dependido casi por completo de saber ver más allá. La capacidad de ver más allá del ritmo pasa el tiempo. Nietzsche dijo de sí mismo: "Yo, como Zarathustra, me adelanté a los tiempos".

Los psicólogos recomiendan ejercitar el arte de crear una visión en la vida de lo que realmente se quiere. Precisamente porque una visión nos guía, nos ayuda a enfocarnos mejor en lo que queremos lograr y superar las hostilidades que eventualmente podrían aparecer.

La visualización es la mejor manera de jugar y adaptarse al tiempo. Si el presente está marcado por una realidad futura que puedes visualizar, aprendes a aprovechar tu capacidad e invertir tiempo. Por otro lado, si no tienes un horizonte, el camino se verá interrumpido regularmente por tus barreras. Parafraseando al filósofo Séneca: Cuando un barco sabe adónde va, cualquier viento le es favorable.

Hagamos un poco de ejercicio. Te reto a que te hagas estas preguntas para ver cómo resulta. ¿Cómo te ves dentro de diez años? Cuando piensas en el futuro, ¿qué ves? Aprovecha y avanza.

Según el psicólogo Erich Fromm, "La vida tiene un dinamismo íntimo que le es propio; tiende a extenderse, vivir y expresarse". En otras palabras, lo natural en la vida es el cambio. Te guste o no, su proceso no se detiene. El espíritu vital avanza; si no lo haces, te quedas atrás.

¡Que Dios te bendiga siempre!

P. Milton
