Marriage and a Church Wedding

In last week's excerpt from Bishop Serratelli's "Pastoral Letter on Marriage", Bishop described the crisis that has arisen in separating marriage from its sacred significance. The social trend of cohabitating before marriage and holding the marriage in non-religious spaces, without a priest as witness, indicates a misunderstanding of the nature of marriage and its importance to a strong society. Today in sections 7-11, we are reminded of the implicitly sacred understanding of marriage that has existed since the beginning of time.

[9] Marriage cannot be divorced from God. It has been sacred from the very first moment of creation. At the very moment God formed man and woman in his own image and likeness, he united them in marriage. "God blessed them, and God said to them, 'Increase and multiply, fill the earth and subdue it'" (Gn 1:28). This blessing of marriage is the one blessing not forfeited by the Flood. God's original purpose for man and woman remains.

[10] The Church did not invent marriage. It came from the hands of the Creator. Sacred Scripture itself defines marriage when it says: "A man will leave his father and mother and will cleave to his wife, and they will become one flesh (Gn 2:24)." "It is a sacrament of the Creator of the universe, hence, it is engraved in the human being himself... [Marriage] is really 'con-created' with man as such, as a fruit of the dynamism of love in which the man and the woman find themselves and thus also find the Creator who called them to love" (Pope Benedict XVI, "Encounter with Youth," St. Peter's Square, April 6, 2006).

[11] During his public ministry, some Pharisees tested Jesus about marriage. They asked him, "Is it lawful for a husband to divorce his wife?" (Mk 10:2) The Pharisees were hotly debating this question. The School of Shammai was strict. It allowed divorce only for sexual immorality. The School of Hillel was lax. Anything that a wife did that displeased her husband was grounds for divorce. They wanted Jesus' opinion as a rabbi.

[12] But there is more to their question than theology. They were clearly trying to set a trap for him. Herod Antipas had only recently divorced his wife to marry Herodias who had divorced her husband. People were scandalized by this and were chattering about it. John the Baptist had spoken against it and was executed for condemning it (Mark 6:17ff). Those who question Jesus want him to say something that will offend Herod and precipitate the swift and untimely end of his ministry and life. Jesus wisely avoids the trap they set.

[13] In response to their question, Jesus returns to the original meaning of the union of man and woman. He says, "From the beginning of creation, 'God made them male and female. For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife and the two shall become one flesh.' So they are no longer two but one flesh. Therefore what God has joined together, no human being must separate" Mk 10:6-9). In God's plan for human happiness, marriage is meant to be indissoluble, the lifelong gift of the spouses to each other.

[14] Already in the Old Testament, the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Hosea saw this understanding of marriage as an icon of the love of God for his people. Jeremiah speaks of God marrying and becoming the husband of Israel (Jer 3:14; 31:32). In Isaiah, the Lord refers to himself as a bridegroom of the house of Israel: "For your Maker is your husband; the Lord of hosts is his name" (Is 54:5). And, Hosea uses his love in a troubled marriage as the faithful, unrelenting, forgiving love of God for his unfaithful people (Hos 1-3; cf. Ez 16).

To be continued next week.
