LUKE,
The Story of Salvation Fulfilled

The Gospel of Luke takes you on a journey that begins with the foretelling of John the Baptist's birth and culminates in Jesus' ascension into heaven. On the road to Emmaus, a story unique to the Gospel of Luke, Jesus gave us the greatest Bible study of all time, laying out his fulfillment of the Old Testament.

In Luke: The Story of Salvation Fulfilled, you will witness key moments in salvation history including the Annunciation, the Nativity, his public ministry, and Jesus' suffering, death, and glorious Resurrection. There are parables found only in Luke, including the Prodigal Son, the Good Samaritan, and the rich man and Lazarus which will show you the mercy and compassion that Jesus has for each one of his children.

In this 8-part study, Jeff Cavins and Dr. Jeffrey Morrow will show you the beautiful Biblical roots for Mary, the Rosary, and the Mass that are found in Luke, strengthening your prayer life like never before.

Dear community of the Church of Saint Ann,

Please accept Favarh's sincere gratitude for nominating our organization for support from the Archbishop's Annual Appeal.

Thanks to the generosity of your parish, and the archdiocese, Favarh received a donation of $6000 to support people with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

Funds from the Archbishop's Annual Appeal make a real impact on the breadth and scope of services that Favarh can provide. Thanks to your support, more individuals have access to better opportunities to engage with their community, and to achieve their personal best.

We are so grateful for your support, and we look forward to continuing to work together to enrich people with disabilities, and their communities.

CONNECTICUT CATHOLIC CONFERENCE LAYS OUT PLAN AHEAD OF 2025 LEGISLATIVE SESSION

With the Connecticut Legislature getting underway for the new session, Chris Healy, executive director of the Connecticut Catholic Public Affairs Conference, is preparing for several challenges that include protecting the sanctity of life, the right to freely practice religious faith amid growing antisemitism, school choice options and social justice issues.

The session officially started Jan. 8 and ends June 4. In the coming weeks, the Conference is anticipating some lawmakers may submit bills that threaten the Catholic faith.

Chris Healy speaks at the 2024 March for Life

“We must prepare for proposals that further abortion practices, that legalize assisted suicide, further harass pregnancy care centers and assault the religious directives Catholic hospitals operate under,” Healy says. “The proponents of these initiatives are supported by national organizations that are not reflective of Connecticut voters.”

The Conference is the public policy and advocacy office of the Catholic bishops in Connecticut which supports or opposes legislation. Its mission is to work with elected officials at the state and federal levels to influence public policy and stand with other faith groups to promote and ensure a better life for all.

At the top of the Conference’s agenda is the issue of biological males participating in girls’ sports and laws regarding transgender surgeries of children.

The Conference advocates Title IX protection of young women the right “to participate in the same scholastic sports as males by prohibiting discrimination based on sex in education programs and activities,” Healy says.

In recent years, the definition was expanded to include transgender males. “This created an unfair reality that bolstered men competing in women’s sports at all competitive levels with the full protection of the federal government,” he says.

Another issue of concern, he adds, is school choice which would give parents “the freedom to guide their children’s future while allowing public funds to follow the child.”

“We will be trying to get something on the books in Connecticut that will allow for people to support school choice financially and get some kind of tax benefit, which will allow more kids to go not only to Catholic schools, but any other school that fits their needs,” Healy says. “We need to help them pursue their dreams, especially if they’re in a failing school district or they’re restricted by their zip code from getting a decent education.”

Religious freedom, which is guaranteed under the Constitution, has faced growing challenges in recent months with acts of antisemitism on college campuses and in the public arena, the executive director says, adding the Conference will work to bring greater public awareness to the problem.

The beginning of a legislative session usually brings a new Connecticut General Assembly based on changes of elected legislators in the 2024 election, Healy says. “There’s always the unknown, but we know what we have to do. We have to get Catholics and others who share our views engaged so their voices are heard. If we organize and do that and follow God’s blessing, we’ll be fine.”

In the past, the Conference has partnered with other faith groups to support issues of faith.

“They share our values on these issues and they appreciate the fact that the Catholic Church has asked them for their help and that we help them as well when we can,” Healy says. “They helped us in opposing assisted suicide, and hopefully we can do that again this year on other issues.”

Healy urges people to get involved with their local elected state legislators to oppose any proposals that come before the Legislature that threaten Catholic teachings. For more information about the Connecticut Catholic Public Affairs Conference, visit ctcatholicpac.org.
