Hope in the Future

In today's gospel, Jesus is preparing us for the future—the moment of his second coming. The great signs he talks about—the signs to watch out for—are the signs that have us look up to the heavens and the skies.

In his first coming at Christmas, Jesus entered our world as one of us, as a baby born to a loving mother who loved him the way we've all come to love him—with love beyond all telling; a love that is eternal. The sign was the love of a family.

In his second coming, the sign will be different. He'll return the way he ascended into the clouds, in the fullness of his glory: resurrected, alive, and ready to make things right and the way it was always meant to be.

Jesus tells us no one knows when it will happen. In fact, he left it up entirely to his Father in heaven. But, it's nothing we need to worry about or be afraid of; when he comes, he's coming to embrace those who are ready for him and want nothing more than to be embraced.

The future is full of hope because God is a part of it. That could be something to hold onto in these times when there's a lot to fear, a lot to be concerned about, a lot of antagonism and news that leaves us wondering. Jesus tells us we can always depend on his word. We'll hear him say, "Heaven and earth will pass away, but my words will not."

And so, we hold onto his word, his gospel; his life. We hold onto faith as we travel the road together.

Odds & Ends

- The bulletin this week has a lot of opportunity to enter into the giving spirit. On Sunday, 11/14 from 8am to 2pm is the annual Gayle Photikarm Memorial Blood Drive. We sold out of Advent Calendars last weekend and ordered some more! We'll have some available after Masses. Next week the Scouts will once again be selling Advent Wreaths, plus we'll be collecting food and essentials for our annual Thanksgiving Food Drive to benefit those in need at our Sharing Parish, St. Aloysius in the city (even our Saint Hubert School families are pitching in).
- And this week, on Tuesday, we'll resume our outreach to children in need as we stuff stockings. We had a great outpouring of candy and treats. On top of all that, Giving Tuesday is right around the corner, too, on November 30th.
- The pandemic stopped a lot of things, but not giving. We have a very generous community who supports so many efforts to help those in need. Thank you!
- Please continue to pray for the youth of parish preparing for their Sacraments. Our Confirmation class went on a "Holy Fire" retreat this past week and our second graders are getting ready for their First Reconciliation, which will take place later this month.

May God continue to lead us, strengthen us, and show us the way to a bright future,

--Fr. Mike

—Mark 13:26-27

Excerpts from the Lectionary for Mass ©2001, 1998, 1970 CCD

"And then they will see 'the Son of Man coming in the clouds' with great power and glory." Take a moment to ponder these words from today's Gospel. How does this image make you feel? For people to truly understand the significance of this message, something profound has to happen within. If we find ourselves reacting with a sense of dread or fear, we have to step back and ask why. Our answer will reveal a great deal about our relationship with God. It's hard to fall in love with a God of whom we are afraid. God does not want us to be afraid. Nor does He want us to align our wills to His in order to avoid some kind of horrendous eternal consequence. That sounds like too much of a superficial power play on the part of God who continues to seek out His children in love.

In order for these words to carry any type of significant meaning for us, they have to resonate with and touch us on a deeper level. They have to be able to connect some dots and have meaning for us in order for this promise to change our lives. Sometimes we get preoccupied with the uncertainty of our deaths. Not knowing when or how we will eventually die can be unsettling. But, more so than needing an answer to the "when" of death, the "what" of death answer we provide has more significance. What happens to us when we die? Whether we die during the natural course of our lives or when Christ comes again, the experience is the same. If we believe that we are meant to live in union with God eternally and that death completes and does not diminish us, then it is worth our time and effort to wait in vigilant hope of the Lord's coming in glory. Our journey back to God is something beautiful to be desired, not dreaded or feared.

Sadly, many folks believe that life is no more than a random occurrence without any purposeful direction or meaning. Death is simply death and nothing more. For them, the Second Coming of Christ and God's eternal promise have no meaning. When we understand the truth about who we are, it changes things up. We then can see ourselves as works in progress who have the choice to either resist the inspirations of the Divine Artist or give into the wonderful creativity of His will. Life awaiting the fullness of Christ to come becomes an unfolding of Divine surprises and abundant joy. God is eternally merciful, forgiving, and welcoming. It is only when we directly reject this gift and turn our backs on Love itself that we have anything to fear.

Cataclysms of the Heart

By Ron Rolheiser, OMI

There are times when the world unravels. Who hasn't had this feeling? "I'm falling apart! This is beyond me! My heart is broken! I feel betrayed by everything! Nothing makes sense any more! Life is upside down!"

Jesus had a cosmic image for this. In the gospels, he talks about how the world, as we experience it, will someday end: "The sun will be darkened, the moon will not give forth its light, stars will fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven will be shaken." When Jesus says this, he is not talking as much about cosmic cataclysms as of cataclysms of the heart. Sometimes our inner world is shaken, turned upside down; it gets dark in the middle of the day, there's an earthquake in the heart, and we experience, in effect, the end of the world as we've known it.

But, Jesus assures us too, in this upheaval, one thing remains the same: the word of God, God's promise of fidelity. That doesn't get turned upside down and, in our disillusionment, we are given a chance to see what really is of substance, permanent, and worthy of our lives. Thus, ideally at least, when our trusted world is turned upside down we are given the chance to grow, to become less selfish, and to see reality more clearly.

Christian mystics call this "a dark night of the soul" and they write it up as if God was actively turning our world upside down and causing all this heartache deliberately to purge and cleanse us.

John of the Cross, the great Spanish mystic, puts it this way: God gives us seasons of fervour and then takes them away. In our seasons of fervor, God gives us consolation, pleasure, and security (sometimes with considerable passion and intensity) inside our relationships, prayer, and work. As a gift from God this is meant to be enjoyed. But, John tells us, God will, at a certain point, take away the pleasure and consolation and we will experience a certain dark night, namely, where we once felt fire, passion, consolation, and security, we will now feel dryness, boredom, disillusion, and insecurity. For John of the Cross, all honeymoons eventually end.

Why? Why would God do this? Why can't a honeymoon last forever?

Because eventually, though not initially, it blocks us from seeing straight. Initially all those wonderful feelings we feel when we first fall in love, when we first begin to pray deeply, and when we first begin to find our legs in the world, are part of God's plan and God's lure. The passion and consolation we feel help lead us out of ourselves, beyond fear and selfishness. But, eventually, the good feelings themselves become the problem because we get hung-up on them rather than on what's behind them.

Honeymoons are wonderful, but, on a honeymoon, generally we are more in love with being in love and all the wonderful energy this creates than we are in love with the person behind all those feelings. The same is true for faith and prayer. When we first begin to pray seriously, we generally are more in love with the experience of praying and what it's doing for us than we are in love with God. On any honeymoon, no matter how intense and pure the feelings seem, those feelings are still very much about ourselves and not about the person we think we love. That is why, sadly, many a warm, passionate honeymoon eventually turns into a cold, passionless relationship.

Until we are purified, and we are purified precisely through dark nights of disillusionment, we are too much seeking ourselves in love and in everything else. Therese of Lisieux used to warn: "Be careful not to seek yourself in love, you'll end up with a broken heart that way!" We'd have less heartaches if we understood that. As well, before we're purified, most of the tears we shed, no matter how real the pain or loss, say more about us than they say about the person or situation we are supposedly mourning.

In all this, there's both bad news and good news: The bad news is that everything we feel as precious will someday be taken from us. Everything gets crucified, including every feeling of warmth and security we have. But the good news is that it will all be given back again, more deeply, more purely, and even more passionately in terms of feeling.

What dark nights of the soul, cataclysms of the heart, do is to take away everything that feels like solid earth so that we end up in a free-fall, unable to grab on to anything that once supported us. But, in falling, we also get closer to bedrock, to God, to reality, to truth, to each other, beyond illusions, beyond selfishness, and beyond manipulative love masquerading as something else. Clarity eyesight comes after disillusionment, purity of heart comes after a certain kind of heartache, and real love comes after the honeymoon.
