

Incoming 6th Grade Summer ELA Assignment:

Welcome to Sixth Grade!

You will be required to read two books this summer. All students must read *The Wild Robot by Peter Brown. When we return to school, we will be working with this novel in both ELA and Science classes. The second book is a book of your choice from the extensive list attached.

Now, you have options when it comes to producing a task for each of your two books.

1. For one of the books, either The Wild Robot or your personal choice book from the list, complete a book review. Attached to this packet is a book review sheet you can fill out—don't forget to rate your book. Be honest. :)
2. For your second book, you have options. Choose any one task from the choice board provided, follow the directions, and bring it to school with you the first week of Sixth Grade this September. I tried to include ideas that would appeal to a wide variety of interests (writing, art, music, acting).
3. Remember—you choose which book to review, and for the other one, you are choosing a choice board choice. Two books read. Two assignments. Only one review, and only one task.

Book Assignments will be due on Friday, September 5, 2025.

If you have any questions at all, please email: ddiiorio@stjamesregional.com.

Pace yourself with this work, please do NOT leave it to the last minute. I know from personal experience this never goes well. Try to get one book done by July 4th and the other by the Assumption, August 15th. Bring your book to the pool or the beach or the mountains, wherever you are, and enjoy some quiet time lost in a great story,

Have a great summer! Stay safe, have fun, relax, and recharge! Can't wait to see you again in September! :) Continue to READ!

Happy summer!

Choice Board Choices Directions:

1. Interview a character from your book.

You might interview a character from your book.

- Write at least ten questions (probably more) that will give the character the opportunity to discuss his/her thoughts and feelings about his/her role in the story.
- There are many different ways you can choose to present your interview. You can present it in written format, record it on video, perform it live in the classroom (must be rehearsed beforehand) – or come up with another way.

2. Create a diary kept by a main character.

- Write a diary that one of the book's main characters might have written surrounding the book's events.
- It should be done from that person's point of view revealing all the major events in his/her life and his/her feelings about these events. Include their hopes, dreams, problems, concerns and frustrations. Remember that the character's thoughts and feelings are very important in a diary.
- The entries in your diary should stretch out over the entire period of time that the novel covers -- from the beginning of the novel to the end. You should have at least 5-6 well written, complete entries.
- Write dates for the entries, if possible.
- Create a cover for your diary.
- Organize the diary – make sure it is in proper order. On the first page, include an information sheet identifying the full name of the character, his/her age or birth date (if known), where he/she lives, and any other important information. Don't forget to include the title and author of the book here.

3. Rewrite that ending!

- Rewrite a new ending to the book you read.
- Be sure to write in the style of the author.
- Don't explain how the ending should be changed. Write as if you were writing the story.
- On a separate page, describe the original ending and the changes you made and then explain why you made these changes.

4. Create a Book Jacket

- Design an ORIGINAL book jacket for your book. You can include everything a regular book jacket has: the title on the spine and front, including the name of the author.
- Include artwork for the cover (front and or back), a section on the inside book jacket flap for a brief description of the book, and a section describing the author.
- Added touch, include reviews from students (or other family members) who have read that book (or make up your own)
- You can use hand drawn images, computer graphics, clip art, and try to have access to a color printer and a variety of colored paper.

5. Cue the Dramatic Scene

Like to be dramatic? Want to be an actor? Here's your chance. This especially works out well if you're reading the same book as one or more of the others in your class. You can work together and write a script and have several rehearsals before presenting it to the class. If you're alone but have a lot of confidence, you can also dress as one of the characters and act out a characterization/scene as a one-woman or one man show.

6. Timeline

- Come up with a list of the most important events in the plot from the beginning of the novel to the end.
- Create a timeline using a long ribbon of butcher paper, a poster board, or index cards attached in order on paper, ribbon, string, etc.(think of more).
- For each event on your timeline, write a brief description of what happens
- Add pictures, clip art, word art and symbols to make your timeline more lively and colorful.
- All writing should be typed and then glued or taped neatly onto the butcher paper, poster board or whatever you've chosen to use.

7. Scrapbook

A scrapbook is an album of important objects that tells about or relates an event. You can put together a scrapbook for one of the main characters in your novel.

- The scrapbook should reflect major character and plot events that occur to that character in the novel.
- You can include photographs, letters, postcards, telegrams, a family tree, newspaper article clippings, memorable items, or anything else you can think of that you might find in a scrapbook.
- If you include objects or photographs, be sure to write captions below describing what they are or what's going on and their significance to the character.
- Create a nice cover for your scrapbook. The first page inside should have the full name of the character, title of the book you read, and the author's name. You could also include some pertinent information about the character, such as his/her birth date, age, or where he/she lives.

8. I write the songs!

Convert the events of the story into a ballad or a song.

- Write the lyrics and adapt the words to a well-known melody (like "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star"). Retell the story through your lyrics.
- Make sure you state what melody you used when writing your lyrics.
- You should have at least 20 lines to your song. (Record it if you want).

9. Going to the movies!

Your book has been bought by a Hollywood movie studio. Create a movie poster to advertise it.

- Give your movie a title! Re-invent a title for the book that would be a great movie title.
- Who directed the movie? {Author}
- Use your poster board to draw a picture that summarizes the story. Pictures must be hand drawn. (No internet pictures or cut-outs) Make it look like a movie poster you would see at the movie theater. Be creative and don't forget to color it.
- Add a cast of characters (starring: Taylor Swift as the main character, 'Roz', Tom Cruise as the gosling, 'Brightbill', etc.) You don't need to have someone for every character, but you should have about three.
- Add the movie trailer (the written summary). The summary should be between 5-8 sentences, and not give the ending away. For example, "In a time of darkness, one person is destined to save the world..." (All writing should be typed and then glued or taped neatly onto the poster board).
- Create a tagline slogan for your movie. Movie taglines should be fun. They should be simple. Movie taglines are designed to get audiences to want to see your movie. For example, Shrek's tagline is: "The greatest fairy tale never told." The Lion King was: "The greatest adventure of all is finding our place in the Circle of Life."
- All work is to be your original work—it may not be pulled from AI, or posters already generated and available online for this book/movie.
