10:00a Sacred Heart School Students - to begin Catholic Schools Week

Please remember in your prayers our Parishioner “Chong” Lawrence who passed away last week. Remember her family too as the same kid Chuck had seen in the waiting

At 11:30 p.m., Chuck could hold back no longer. He asked his son, “Was there a little boy in here to see you?” “Yes,” Chuck answered.

By Wednesday at 4 p.m., Chuck McGivern, the boy who had been on his deathbed for four days, was up and around. The next Saturday - a week to the day he was admitted to the hospital - he was released.

Today, Chucky is an A student at St. Martin’s School. Not everybody believes in miracles, and those people are going to say Chucky just beat the odds. His parents won’t argue with that – beating such odds is a miracle in itself. But there’s a postscript to this story.

While he was comatose, Chucky had a vivid dream. He was in a hospital bed surrounded by his family, many Asian children who brought him gifts, and an older boy who, in the dream, was his best friend. A boy of about 12 who wore black-rimmed glasses.

That’s not the end, however. A week after his release from the hospital, a week before Christmas 1982, Chucky and his parents drove down to the Shrine of St. John Neumann to say what would become the first of many prayers of thanks. They were offered a tour of the monastery. Hanging on the wall in one of the rooms was a painting of a child with shaggy dark brown hair.

Chucky joked to his brother, “That was my best friend in my dream,” he said. The picture was John Neumann at 12.
