Sister Christina Chavez

Sister Christina Chávez is a Sister with the Congregation of Divine Providence of San Antonio, TX. She is from the Diocese of San Angelo and graduated from Crane High School. Though she is the product of a devout Catholic family that is active in the local parish, she did not have the religious life on her radar as an option for her future. She grew up attending faith formation classes for her Sacraments and continued until high school graduation. In college at Texas Tech University, she participated in the Catholic Student Association of her campus, eventually joining in on the Raider Awakening retreat. Only then did the thought of "becoming a nun" begin to surface and she didn't believe that this was something a person could do in today's world. She was unfamiliar with the religious life and had only an impression from stereotypes in movies or on TV so she didn't initially attempt to pursue the calling. Rather, the calling pursued her and she found the CDP Sisters by picking up an information card at St. Stephen's parish in Midland. That's when her formation for religious life began (in 2013) and she professed her First Vows in 2018. The period after first vows is sometimes referred to as "temporary profession" because the Sister's vows are said for one year at a time and will expire at the end of that year. This means every year, the Sister is living her vows and will also evaluate whether or not she feels called to continue in the religious life and will make a request to renew her vows. Her community is also discerning whether she is a good fit for them as well. After several years in temporary profession, a Sister is able to make her permanent, life-long commitment with her "perpetual profession" also known as "final vows" to which she professes to live for the rest of her life. After twelve years in this formation process, this is the step which Sister Christina will be taking this summer. Sister Christina has worked for the Diocese of San Angelo for two years as the campus minister serving college students in Odessa & Midland. She enjoys serving young adults in this critical time in their lives. She strives to create welcoming spaces where students are encouraged to build community and grow in faith.
