.Join the Revolution By: Joshua Kapika

I have recently started reading an amazing book titled "Holiness Revolution", by Dan DeMatte. This book has inspired me to invite all who are ready and willing to join a revolution. Not against a tyrannical government, but against sin and Satan. To fight for our freedom from slavery to sin and to bring a spirit of holiness to the world.

I think we would all be in agreement that our state, country and entire world are in need of change. We have grown so accustomed to living in sin that we would rather risk losing our souls than submit to the will of God. Our society fosters a life of sin and it's the Church that is responsible to bring light into a world filled with darkness.

Brothers and sisters in Christ, it is our responsibility to be the love and light of Christ in a world where love has been relegated to a mere fulfillment of sexual desires instead of a love that is self-giving and sacrificial. We need to stand up and step out as our early brothers and sisters did two thousand years ago.

When did we go from being brave and courageous men and women who would risk their lives for their faith to a bunch of feel good fuzzy feeling lovey-dovey Catholics.

Early Christians understood that it was do or die and were willing to lay down their lives just as Christ gave his life for his Church.

Living in America we may not feel as if we are under attack or that we are being persecuted, but the truth is we are in the midst of a battle every day of our lives. The spiritual battle between God and Satan is constantly being fought in our hearts and minds and unless we accept that this battle is raging within us we will become enslaved to Satan.

This may sound scary or off-putting, but it is the truth. We cannot deny that every day in America 6 teenagers commit suicide, 4,000 babies are murdered legally through abortion and 8,000 teenagers become sexually active. These are the hard facts. Our young people are falling further from the grace of God and it's because we are no longer brave enough to say enough is enough.

The world has enough nominal Catholics; we need Catholics who are willing to be the change in the world. We need Christian men and women who are going to be brave and courageous and willing to put their reputations and maybe even their lives on the line for the sake of Christ and his Gospel.

So how will we change the world, how will we make a difference? It starts with you and me. We need to look into our own lives and discern what we need to change in us in order to change the world. We need to deny our own selfish wants and desires and submit to God's will, his call for holiness.

The world needs more saints; it needs more holy people. Saints aren't people who are sinless. Saints are men and women who admit that they are sinners, but submit to God's holy will. Saints are sinners who are willing to live and die for Christ. Saints are people like you and me who are willing to choose God over our own wants and desires.

It seems impossible, but nothing is impossible with God (Luke 1:37). Join me in this revolution of holiness and together let us strive for a better world. Be the light that God needs in the world be his love in a world full of hate and violence. Be the man or woman he has created you to be. BE CHRIST!!!

EUCCHARISTIC PROCESSION

Sunday, November 25 ~ 11:00am

St. Michael parish, in celebration of the Feast of Christ the King, will be conducting a Eucharistic procession around our church. The procession is a public display of Christ's sovereignty over the entire universe.

Join and walk with us as we raise Christ's true presence in the blessed sacrament as we march around the church area. Let this be a reminder to all who see that Christ is truly King of this Church, this community and the entire world.

WHAT TO KNOW ABOUT THE FLU SEASON SO FAR

Get vaccinated now for maximum protection

This year's flu season has been mild so far, according to a new report from the CDC, but that's no reason to skip your flu shot — especially in light of news that low vaccination rates may have contributed to the severity of the 2017-2018 flu season.

According to the report, flu activity in the United States remains low across the board, which is typical for this time of year. Flu season tends to ramp up in the fall before peaking between December and February, meaning now is the ideal time to get a flu shot if you haven't already. The CDC recommends that those who aren't yet vaccinated do so by the end of October. (And remember, it takes about two weeks for antibodies to develop before receiving the vaccine.)

A second report released by the agency reveals that less than 4 in 10 American adults received a flu vaccine during the 2017-2018 season, which was particularly severe and ultimately resulted in approximately 960,000 hospitalizations and 79,000 deaths — the highest number in decades. Low vaccination rates, along with the predominance of a particularly harsh strain that the flu vaccine is known to be less effective against, were likely contributing factors.

There's no word on this year's vaccination rates, but one way to get a sense of how this year's flu will behave is to look to the Southern Hemisphere, where the flu season runs from April to September. The CDC says this season's flu activity in the Southern Hemisphere has been "relatively low and fairly mild" overall - promising, but hardly a guarantee.

Adults ages 65 and up should opt for the high-dose flu vaccine and ask their provider about receiving the pneumococcal vaccine, which can help prevent against serious complications, like pneumonia.

The pneumococcal vaccine is also recommended for those younger than 65 who smoke or have chronic conditions, such as diabetes or heart disease.
