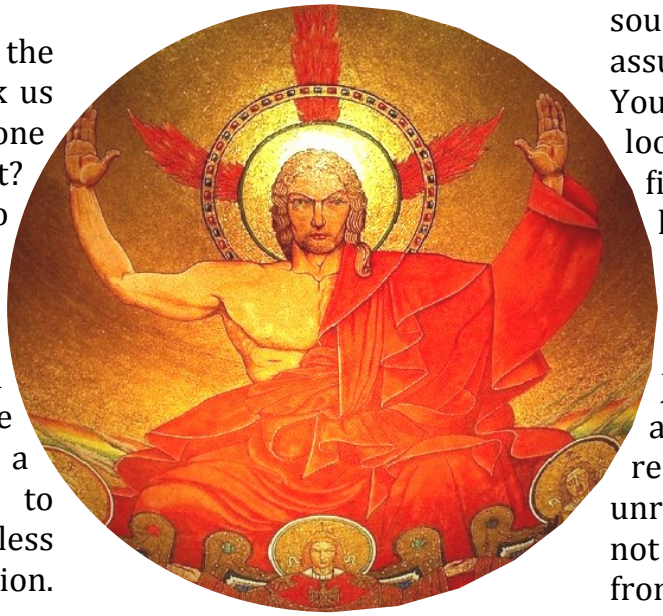
SUNDAY REFLECTION

When the Day Comes

By: Joshua Kapika

Are we ready for when the day comes? Will Christ look us up and down and say well done my good and faithful servant? As we remember those who have gone before us, who have fought the good fight, we recall to mind our own mortal life. In today's gospel Jesus reminds us that there will come a time of testing a time when we will have to speak the good news regardless of consequence or persecution. The reality is that day is now.

As Catholics, we can no longer sit around and wait for someone else to preach the gospel. We cannot just sit by and let others do the things each of us are called to do. By virtue of our baptism, we are all called to share in the mission of Christ in big and small ways. Some of us are called to stand up against injustices others are called to share the faith either through teaching or by being a living example. Regardless of what our call is we must do as Christ instructed.



We are living in a time and place that is not too unfamiliar with what is described in today's gospel. We may be lucky to live in a place like the United States, but anti-Christian sentiment is growing and it is now our responsibility to make sure that Christ's message of faith, hope, and love isn't drowned out by the noisiness of today's secular world.

The Church needs men and women with zeal for souls, people who desire the good of others, and with a desire to lead souls to Christ. We cannot assume someone else will do it. You are the someone Christ is looking for. If we truly want to find ourselves ready for when he comes again, we must unapologetically share the good news of Christ Jesus with all those we meet. Jesus could come any day and he will either find us ready with our loins girded or unready with our heads down not even realizing he is right in front of our faces.

"You will be hated because of my name, but not a head on your head will be destroyed. By your perseverance you will secure your lives." ~ Luke 21:19
