For the next few weeks you'll find the cross on the north side altar due to the candles of our deceased on the south side altar. PLEASE watch the bulletin for your name. Dear Parishioners and Friends of the Catholic Parishes of Western Holt and Boyd Counties,

Is our God cozy or cosmic? That is the large and exciting question that challenges us on this last weekend of the liturgical year as we celebrate the solemnity of Christ the King. It is the celebration of the climax, not only of this year of grace, but also of the end, the omega point of the mystery toward which we orient our lives.

This weekend's gospel (John 18:33b-37) proclaims that in Jesus the reigning presence of God comes among us in the flesh. Rather than Jesus being put on trial by Pilate, it is the Roman governor who is put on trial by the eloquent Word who stands before him bound as a prisoner.

"Are you the King of the Jews?" asks Pilate, understanding kingship as political, with possibly religious implications, and therefore wary of any claim that could be a challenge to absolute Roman authority. Jesus replies with a question that seeks to confront Pilate with his own personal commitment as opposed to what "others" tell him about Jesus. The issue is no longer Jesus's guilt or innocence, but whether Pilate will respond to the truth of Jesus's kingship. Three times Jesus speaks of what his kingdom is not. It is not of this world in the sense that it neither takes its origin from here, nor is it an earthly kingdom that would be a rival to Caesar and Roman imperialism. But it does belong in this world and its followers do have a role to play in human affairs of justice.

Like Jesus, his followers are not power brokers or mercenaries defending their own "kingdoms" of political or religious power; violence, exploitation, and opportunism have no part in the following of Jesus.

"Then you are a king?" pushes Pilate, and Jesus responds to what Pilate has called him by speaking of what his power really is: the power of the truth John proclaimed in the Prologue:

*"And the Word became flesh and made his dwelling among us,
and we saw his glory,
the glory as of the Father's only Son,
full of grace and truth"
(John 1:14; NABRE).*

The life, death, and resurrection of Jesus testify to this truth, and all who listen to Jesus and commit themselves to his wisdom will belong to the truth and to his kingdom. Pilate can make no sense of this. His world is more concerned with illusions of grandeur than with truth.

On this day we all stand not before Pilate but with him, to be interrogated by Christ the King. What power do we seek and how would we like to get it? Do we excuse ourselves of manipulating and exploiting others for the sake of safeguarding our own status or progress? How often do we strike out with the violent word or the cutting silence? Timothy Radcliffe queries whether our fascination with the countless TV shows and books that are concerned with the "naked" something or other, with either self-revelation or the exposure of others, is an indicator of a frustrated hunger for truth? He goes on to comment that in Dante's Inferno "the icy heart of hell was kept for those who undermined the human community of truth: the liars, the fraudulent, the flatterers, the forgers, and worst of all the traitors" (What is the Point of Being a Christian?). Do we belong to the community of truth that listens to and follows Jesus?

Behind Christ is the God who reveals himself in Christ, the "I AM" who is the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End, the Almighty, who is not the cozy God but the dynamic, transforming, and cosmic God, the only one whose mystery is big enough to show us a new way into the experience of the holy and large truth when we are disenchanted by unholy minutiae and legalisms.

Have a happy and safe Thanksgiving!

Ad multos annos! Fr Starman, Pastor
