From Fr. Leo

The Baltimore Catechism teaches that sin is the breaking of a law of God.

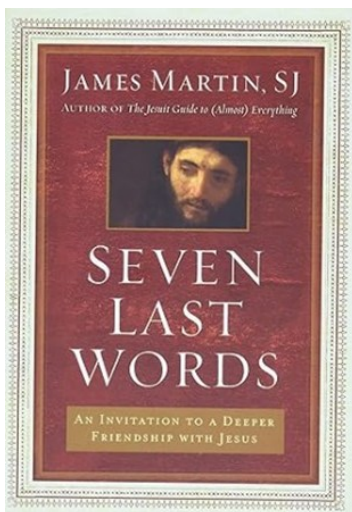

There is a problem with that definition. The issue is that sin is always about hurting a relationship. Laws are impersonal. Sin is personal. Sin involves our relationship with God, others and ourselves.

The commandment says, do not kill. Yes, we know that. Don't need a law to teach us that. Jesus takes this commandment and brings it down to a personal level in our relationships with our brothers. Anger itself can hurt a relationship. We need to work through moments of anger so our relationships grow and love is treasured. That's personal.

The commandment against adultery is expanded to make us conscious of our sexual attractions and how they enliven us and influence how we relate with others. Rather than seeing a sexual object we are to see and reverence a human being. This puts things into perspective and insures our dignity and the dignity of others. At no point does this mean we try to live without attractions. No, God implanted them in us and we are to treasure his gift and safe guard its beauty with reasonable modesty.

Honesty is important. Saying yes when we mean yes, and no when we mean no. Not leading others on because we respect them and ultimately our true selves.

All healthy spirituality builds relationships with love. The Eucharist we celebrate is not a legal action. It is an exchange of love. Jesus comes to us in the bread and we welcome him into our inner beings. We commune for a while with no words needed. Think of times you experienced the wordless presence of God but felt something deep within. Or think of a way to create such a moment by finding a way to rest in God in a way that means something to you.

“Seven Last Words: An Invitation to a Deeper Friendship with Jesus” By James Martin, SJ

This book is a written version of Fr. Martin's reflections given in New York's cathedral with Cardinal Dolan presiding. I consider Fr. Martin a sound and profound spiritual writer. I am looking forward to sharing this small volume with you on Wednesday evenings during Lent beginning on Wednesday, February 25th and ending on Wednesday, April 1, 2026. We will meet from 6:00 pm to 7:00 pm.

I have ten available copies of the book – cost is $8 per book. For the first meeting we will cover the intro and the first chapter.
