Friendship

The letters to the Hebrews were written about 80 years after the death of Jesus. The author was never really known. We must think back to the time that it was written to better understand the customs of that day. The church that Jesus built was under constant persecution, but it continued to grow. This letter was written to the Hebrews, to the Jewish people, for the purpose of opening their minds to a better understanding of the mission of Jesus. His entire life was spent as a sacrificial gift to the God that they worshiped. In an approach of love rather than fear. Jesus offered his prayers and supplication with loud cries and tears which were much like the way the Jewish people prayed. Jesus was looked upon as a high priest forever in the order of Melchizedek, who was admired and loved by the Jewish people for many centuries. The Jewish people had a tradition that if you sin and if you sin in an act of ignorance then the sin could be forgiven by atonement and a sacrifice. If you were to sin in an act of deliberation, there was no atonement for that. As you can see, the connection between the old Jewish way was different to the way of Jesus in that any sin could be forgiven. The love and forgiveness that Jesus brought was accepted and followed by some Jews of that time but because it caused the loss of control to the Jewish's higher power it caused dissention and danger to all who followed Jesus.
