Friendship

Today St. Paul is focusing on the Ephesians who do not know Christ. He is opening the doors to bring them into the church he is building for Christ.

The lives they are living does not reflect a spiritual morality and is forcing them to live in disordered existence. Their rules are based on their human desires causes suffering and focuses on continued corruption. St. Paul offered them unity with Jesus through Baptism and a life of conversion to know the true purpose of this life and the wonder of an eternal existence. He did not conceal the requirements for life changes but focused on the benefits of peace, understanding and love.

Human nature is exactly that, human nature. We can find ourselves also in a position of looking at our lives in a day-to-day existence. We can gather together our accomplishments and what we acquire. Is this what we are here for? Is our earthly prosperity our purpose? Or is St. Paul correct and that this is not as good as it gets. God created us out of love with the desire for us to give and receive love. People are made to love, and things were made to use. Sometimes we can get that backwards by loving things and using people to keep the things we love.

The greatest gift that you can give someone
Is to share your love with them.
