Weekly Reflection

In the Parable of the Pharisee and the tax collector, we heard how the Pharisee considered himself as righteous and condemned the tax collector. He was really a good man but he lacked compassion for others. If the first big mistake of the Pharisee was to think that God would be impressed by his boasting, the second was in his thinking that he was better than others. Two things especially make our prayers void and of no effect: a proud sense of our own righteousness, and contempt for others. But a humble heart is contrary to both of these. Let us remember that the humble prayer of the tax collector implied all the formalities of repentance, restitution and change of life, and framed them in his awareness of his total unworthiness compared to the holiness of God, And so, as Jesus tells his audience and us, as a reward of his humble prayer for mercy, the tax collector received it and went home truly "justified," i.e., "reconciled to God."

Reflexión seminal

En la parábola del fariseo y el publicano, escuchamos cómo el fariseo se consideraba justo y condenaba al publicano. Era realmente un buen hombre, pero carecía de compasión por los demás. Si el primer gran error del fariseo fue pensar que Dios quedaría impresionado por su jactancia, el segundo fue pensar que era mejor que los demás. Dos cosas especialmente hacen que nuestras oraciones sean nulas y sin efecto: un sentido orgulloso de nuestra propia justicia y desprecio por los demás. Pero un corazón humilde es contrario a ambos. Recordemos que la humilde oración del recaudador de impuestos implicaba todas las formalidades del arrepentimiento, la restitución y el cambio de vida, y las enmarcaba en su conciencia de su total indignidad en comparación con la santidad de Dios, Y así, como Jesús nos dice a su audiencia y a nosotros, como recompensa de su humilde oración por misericordia, el recaudador de impuestos lo recibió y se fue a casa verdaderamente "justificado", es decir, "reconciliado con Dios".
