Saint of the week

Venerable Mother Henriette DeLille was a woman of faith, perseverance, and service who dedicated her life to the people of New Orleans. Her courage, compassion, and dedication to the oppressed was a shining example of what it means to live a life of service and love.

Prayer

O good and gracious God, You called Henriette DeLille to give herself in service and in love to the slaves and the sick, to the orphan and the aged, to the forgotten and the despised.

Grant that inspired by her life, we might be renewed in heart and in mind. If it be Your will may she one day be raised to the honor of sainthood. By her prayers, may we live in harmony and peace, through Jesus Christ, Our Lord.
Amen.

Father Matthew Oakland

We begin the month of November by celebrating the saints in Heaven—those great models and examples who show us the way, who show us how to share God’s love. Each story is unique, and each powerful, the story of the grace of God at work in the world, and our own individual struggle at times to be faithful. November 4th is the Feast of St. Charles Borromeo, a perfect example of everything right and wrong with the Church.

Life started out well. He was born in a castle in 1538. He decided early on to enter into service to the Church. At 12, he made the first step of religious life with tonsure (the little bald spot) and started receiving income from a Benedictine Abbey connected to his family. He donated most of it to those in need, those to whom it truly belonged he said—keeping only enough for his education. Taking a short break to care for family affairs after the death of his father, he eventually earned doctorates in both civil and church law.

Three weeks later on Christmas Day, 1559, his uncle was elected pope, summoned him to Rome, made him a cardinal and entrusted to him a share of church governance—at the age of 22(?!). Later that year, he was also named the administrator of the Archdiocese of Milan, filling the hole left by his uncle—though he wasn’t even ordained a priest, and didn’t live there. It was pure nepotism, not surprising as a member of the Medici family on his mother’s side, though it was an era in which trust was hard to come by. Cardinal Borromeo, in the midst of such power, chose poverty—living a very simple life, and requiring those under his authority to do the same. He also used his influence to promote education, and a general reform.

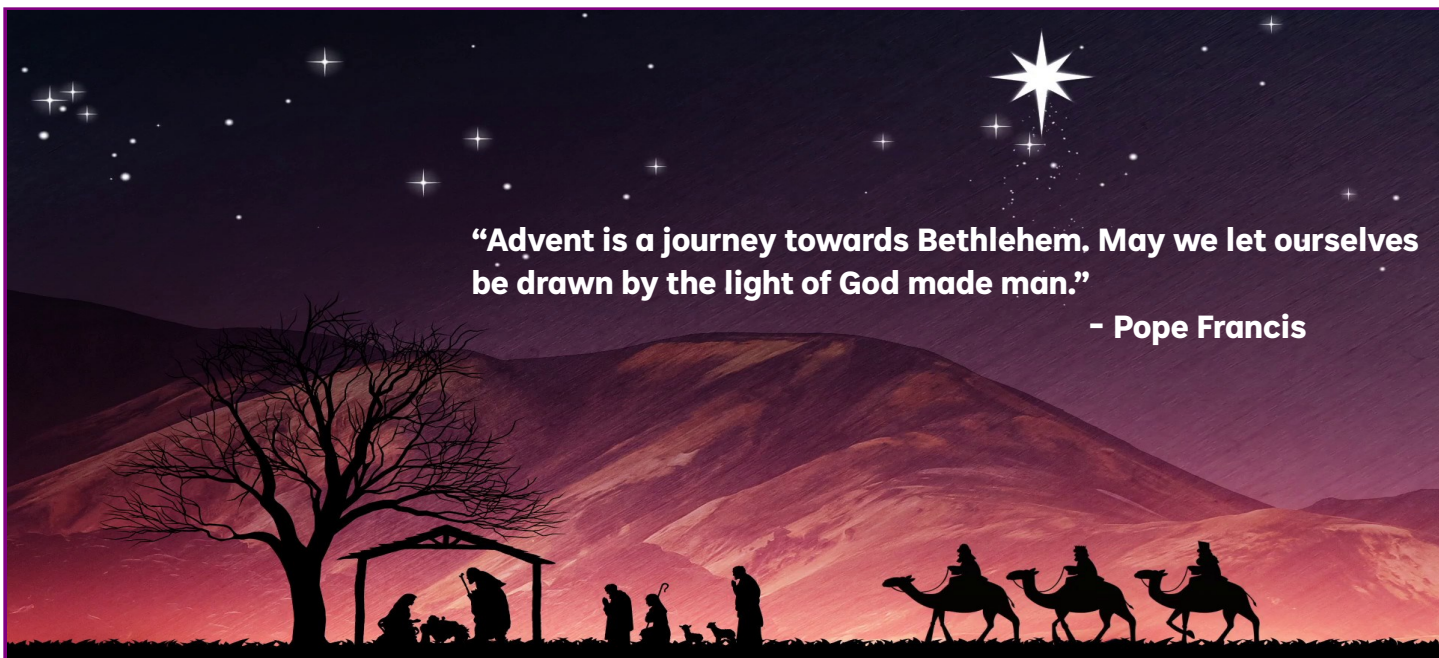

1562 started off with the young cardinal helping run the third and final session of the Council of Trent, called to help address the crisis in the Church of the Protestant Revolution. The work excited him. But as the year drew to a close, Charles’ older brother died, and his family begged him to leave work in the Church, to marry and carry on the family name and leadership of the family affairs.

He once again spurred fortune and glory. In 1563 he oversaw the completion of the Council of Trent, was instrumental in the writing of the catechism they published to teach the faith, and was ordained a priest and bishop so that he could serve the people of Milan in their midst as a good shepherd—for the first time in 80 years.

Milan was at that time a center of industry, of politics, and was the largest diocese in the world with 3,000 clergy and over 800,000 Catholics. Part of the impetus of the Protestant Revolution was corruption, and that was true in Milan as well. Archbishop Borromeo took a different tack than Fr. Martin Luther, though. He set about at a rigorous pace, and nothing was exempt. He sought to better educate the clergy, founding the modern seminary system, and started colleges as well. He also demanded a change in lifestyle for those priests who were not currently living in a way fitting of their promises. Religious orders were invited to reexamine their living of the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, and he made visits to ensure that changes were happening. Some weren’t too keen on this—hence the assassination attempt in his own chapel by a religious brother, at 1AM when he was praying with his staff. He didn’t just see to education of the clergy, but was the founder of Sunday School for youth.

In 1576, when a plague struck the city, many of wealth and power fled for safety. Borromeo remained, and used his family wealth to care for the sick, the hungry and the dying. When that wasn’t enough in the face of a famine, he took out loans and incurred deep debt to feed tens of thousands each day. He finally convinced the governor to return and do his duty. He died at the age of 46, worn out from implementing the vision of the Council of Trent—a renewal in holiness, in virtue and in education, something good for every age.

“Advent is a journey towards Bethlehem. May we let ourselves be drawn by the light of God made man.”

– Pope Francis

CARE FOR CREATION

Pope Francis urges us to act for the environment

In his recent exhortation Laudate Deum, a follow-up to his landmark environmental encyclical Laudato Si, Pope Francis tells us "the world in which we live is collapsing and may be nearing the breaking point." He pleads that we move "beyond the mentality of appearing to be concerned but not having the courage needed to produce substantial changes." He particularly calls on us to change our consumerist lifestyles and advocate for systemic actions to address the climate crisis. The Catholic Climate Covenant urges us to spend a few minutes to take the "My Laudate Deum Action Pledge" and share our commitments with others. Join with other Catholics in the United States in taking the pledge and together we can help transform the world.
