6th SUNDAY OF EASTER: No, "slave" is not a "bad word" in the cultural setting of scripture, unless it specifically refers to being a "slave to sin" - and in that case it is an activity rather than a state in life.

The core theme underlying the gospel message for this continuing segment of John's gospel is that of unity. Last week we heard about "remaining in the vine" and "bearing fruit or getting cast into the fire." This week we hear the admonition and invitation to "live in his love" and "bear fruit that endures." In both cases, and in upcoming weeks, we will hear about this demand and command to live in unity. Unity can come about only through Jesus, the true vine. As "servant friends" of Jesus, he is taking us into his deepest family circle, entrusting us with his message of unity and giving us two charges. First, to make unity a reality in our own lives. Second, to pass on that teaching and example of Jesus. It is an honor to be invited into this circle of close "friends" of Jesus. It is an honor to be called to become a "missionary" in Jesus' name, a mission we live out in our daily activities and normal environment. We are formed in unity, and our mission is unity. Our identity will be manifested only by a life of obedience to his command to love everyone.

GOSPEL REFLECTION

In today's Gospel Jesus reminds us to love one another. What does it mean to love one another? Prayerfully review the Ten Commandments, notice that the first three are about loving God and the last seven are about loving our neighbor.
