

33rd SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

November 14, 2021

This Sunday we celebrate the 33rd Sunday in Ordinary Time. This will be the last Sunday that we read from the Gospel of St. Mark. Next Sunday there will be a passage from St. John for the Feast of Christ the King of the Universe. The Gospel passage for this Sunday contains verses detailing events or signs preceding the end-times. The signs appear to be a little frightful and ominous, but the key words here are "...after the tribulation..." the Son of Man will be coming in the clouds. There will be an ordeal of sorts before the darkening of the heavenly luminaries and the coming of the Son of Man. What we should all be looking for is the coming of the Son of Man. That is the good news here. The interesting thing here for us as we read this passage is what part of the story grabs our attention: the tribulation or the coming of the Son of Man. As a people of faith, we are to see with the eyes of faith and look beyond the tribulations of this world and eagerly await the coming of the Son of Man. This is similar to looking beyond the horror of Mt. Calvary and seeing the faithful love of God.

The thing that unsettles most folks is the part about the "tribulation." Jesus indicated that there would be a time of trial and suffering. Yes, that is a concern for all of us. But we should always remember that for the faithful, trials and sufferings are a result of living in a sinful world. We don't especially like the idea of suffering or persecution. Who in their right mind would welcome such things? However, to be honest, we must expect such things to happen because we are a people of faith who live in an imperfect sinful world. This is precisely how we know we are a people of Faith: trials and tribulations. This is how our faith will be tested. Ironically, if we have never experienced a testing of our faith in this world, we have to ask some serious questions about our faith life.

The Theological virtue of faith is very much like the virtue of love. We can learn something about the virtue of faith when we consider the virtue of love. How do we know that we love? It is tested. The test usually comes in difficult times that require selfless sacrifice. What am I willing to sacrifice to show my love? This is not a feeling or mere sentimentality. Love is a commitment. A commitment that is an act of the will: a choice. I choose to love. I am also willing to suffer a sacrifice or sacrifices to manifest my commitment to love. The sacrifice is part of the test. Love will grow when it is tested.

Another part of the test is expressed in the perseverance and the unconditional nature of the act of the will. Love demands commitment. Love will only grow if there are no conditions or limitations on our time. The sacrifice is lived as an unconditional choice and open-ended perseverance. Love will be tested: by the personal sacrifice (cost); by the unknowns of the future (what ifs) and perseverance for the long haul. These test and authenticate the will to love.

In the same way we can say these are present as the tests and trials for our faith. What am I willing to sacrifice for what I believe? Am I willing to lay down my life for what I believe? Is my belief, my faith in God, unconditional? Is my faith ready to persevere? Like love, this is the heroic expression of the act of faith. Since faith and love are closely related, the Theological Virtues mutually support each other. We trust what we love and love what we trust. The more we trust the more we love and vice-a-versa.

We must always remember this dynamic about virtues, they grow when they are tested. "Virtue is its own reward." We become what we practice. A person is referred to as a loving person because that person loves. A person is referred to as a faithful person because that person practices faithfulness. (Sadly, the opposite is true when it comes to vice.)

It seems so simple and obvious. However, the practice of virtue is very difficult because all virtues are tested. This gives us a clear indication of the tribulation that precedes the coming of the Son of Man. This tribulation can be an individual experience, a communal experience or a combination of both. Many have the idea that the tribulation will be some huge cataclysmic event that is to come. Yet it may be a little everyday experience in the most common events or choices we make every day.

Some testing is very simple. This may be so since a person may not have a very strong faith and a simple thing may be enough for them to break faith or betray love. Some of the testing of faith or love may be complex and difficult all of which reflects a complexity and strength of an individual's faith or love. No matter the caliber, there is no heroic faith or love when they are not tested. If one is not faithful and loving in small things one should not expect to be faithful and loving in greater or heroic things.

We live in a world tainted by sin. It is a world that does not welcome virtue or holiness. In fact, it is a world that gives lip service to virtue and really does not welcome the practice of virtue. (Have you ever heard of Virtue signaling!) We live in a world that is more tolerant of vice and self-indulgence. This is a telltale sign of a sinful world. If it doesn't directly infringe on us, we usually don't care. Indifference is also dangerous. If we want to be honest here this is a characteristic of personal sinfulness. Having tolerance of vice or indifference for a sinful world would afford us a chance to avoid a life with trials or tribulations.

When people find themselves steeped in vice and self-indulgence there is a lack of awareness of the seriousness of their condition. At a certain time if they become aware of their condition, they seem befuddled as to how they have fallen to such depths. When it comes to vice one just goes with the flow because it is easy. There is no thought required for vice. If you want to do this or that, you just do it. There is no thought for the future or consequences; much less a thought of eternity: the condition of our immortal soul. With vice it is easy to flow in the pattern of least resistance, especially when it appears to be satisfying and fun.

This is not the case for virtue, especially when we consider the virtue of faith. To live a life of faith, like love, is hard work. Part of the hard work comes in the form of reasoning and an act of the will to actually practice the virtues daily. Faith requires thought. God gave us a mind to know Him. Faith is a choice. God gave us a free will. I believe. With all choices there is thought and a decision. God does not expect us to forgo using our mind and free will. Therefore, if we are to be individuals of faith, we must use our mind and free will to choose to believe and love. There is no way to get around this basic work. The practice of the faith will require the real hard work manifested as commitment and perseverance.

As we put our faith in Jesus Christ, we expect trials and tribulations. Our focus is not on the trials and tribulations. Our focus is on the coming of the Son of Man: Jesus Christ. We will always have trials because we have faith. There may very well be some serious trials concerning our personal faith as well as trials of the Catholic Church in American society. We will feel pressure to abandon or compromise our faith: individually and as a Church. These are the trials that should motivate us to give extra time to prayers and reflections on our Catholic Christian Faith. Greater attention should be given to the teachings of the Church. Those who know and Love the Faith will live the Faith in Love. The trials will be a means of authenticating and solidifying our trust in Jesus Christ and the Church he gave us to assist us on our way to the Kingdom. Nevertheless, our eyes are always focused on Jesus Christ and not the trials.

Have a great week.
Father Ralko

Real Presence, Real Future reflections: The Perfection of God's Plans

Dcn. Tom Berg, Jr., St. Andrew Parish

Today's scriptures assure with spectacular imagery the coming victory of God's plans for humanity, assuring us that Jesus Christ "by one offering... has made perfect forever those who are being consecrated." The Lord promises that His "words will not pass away." As we continue to move forward with our Real Presence, Real Future process, let us remain committed to listening to the Lord and one another so that we perceive God's will for our Diocese and for each of us individually. RPRF is one way by which we can better live in hope and faith in these words from sacred scripture and be participants in the victory of God salvific plans.
