

RESPECT LIFE SUNDAY

October 2, 2022

Each October the Church in the United States celebrates Respect Life Month. The first Sunday of October is observed as Respect Life Sunday. As Catholics, we are called to cherish, defend, and protect those who are the most vulnerable, from conception to natural death, and at every point in between. During the month of October, the Church asks us to reflect more deeply on the dignity of every human life.

Part of our reflections center on the precious gift of life that is our personal gift from God. If each of us believes this to be true for our self then we must believe it to be true for others. Thus, it urges us to have the proper respect due to all persons because they share this precious gift from God. We are called upon to give careful reflection on the serious moral issues surrounding life. In essence all moral issues ultimately deal with and are based upon genuine respect for life. All moral issues ultimately deal with our relationship with one another. It is based upon our proper respect we have for the author of life itself. In the gospels Jesus reminds us that the Commandments are summed up in Love: love for God and love for your neighbor. If you think about it stealing, lying, adultery etc. are all offenses against another person. In pressing this further these sins are also offenses against the One who gives us our dignity. If we have little regard or respect for others as being created in the image and likeness of God, we will have little respect for God who is the origin of our life and dignity. Thus, our immoral/sinful behavior not only offends or hurts others they are also offensive to God. The whole moral law is concerned with our dealings with persons. Morality is ultimately about respecting life.

During "Respect Life Month" we focus more specifically on those issues that directly attack life itself. The scope of our reflections are those attacks directed on the most vulnerable members of our society: abortion, euthanasia, physician assisted suicide, embryonic stem cell research, cloning and so forth. We have raised awareness of these issues often. We have also reaffirmed the Catholic Church's persistent moral stance on these issues on a regular basis. We know that we cannot be silent on these issues because society constantly brings these up as something good and necessary. Thus, on this very point we are reminded of this common norm in society... "Silence gives consent". We cannot be silent on these issues. We do not give our consent for society's moral laxity on life issues. These issues keep resurfacing.

If we remain silent, these issues they will go unchallenged. The ultimate effect will be acceptance of these practices as part of the normal fabric of our society because there are no objections. In many cases this has happened. As a result, many have become indifferent to the seriousness of the life issues. We are very aware that the Church has taken a strong position on these issues. To be honest, many people turn a deaf ear and try to be indifferent to the clear reasoning behind the Church's stand. As a matter of course, indifference to the Church's stance on the life issues will eventually evolve into more violence; toward the Church and life itself.

Nevertheless, we are called upon to pray and reflect on the life issues. With the grace of God and a sincere desire to open our minds to the truth, we will grow in a greater understanding of the wisdom and greatness of God's design for life. We will also discover that when it comes to the life issues that our attention to the small things is just as important as the big things.

As a priest I have been called upon to be with people dealing with life threatening issues. I recall a number of occasions where various individuals were facing the frightening diagnosis of cancer. Many have had to undergo a long-term course of treatment. Others have had to face surgery as their course of treatment. In the case of surgery there is always that recurring question after surgery... "Doctor, did you get it all?" When it comes to these kinds of situations, we are very aware that a microscopic cancer cell can be life threatening. That "small thing" mattered. This is true about a single cancer cell. It's only a small cell but a doctor can look at this single cell under a microscope and state that this is a cancer cell. We want nothing to do with a single cancer cell in our body. That one cell has the potential for jeopardizing a life.

As I think about this, my thoughts go to another single cell: a fertilized human egg. When it comes to this single cell many people want to call it all kinds of things other than what it truly is: a new human life. They call it "tissue" or the "product of conception" or anything else, but not a new human life. Yet in that cell there is everything that is needed for a fully developed human life. Amazingly this microscopic cell matters. Thus, we can discover the goodness and wisdom of God in this smallest of cells. In this case, the "small thing" matters.

This reminds me of a euphemism that is often used about this "small thing". Sometimes people refer to a human embryo as a "potential human being." As if this embryo could be anything other than human! I don't know about you, but I find this euphemism to be repugnant. This phrase is useful for those justifying, softening or denying the truth of abortion. It is also used in reference in the support for embryonic stem cell research and cloning; two particular issues that we do not hear much in the news as of late. Nevertheless, my suspicion is that these last two issues have not gone away but are being pursued quietly in various laboratories. The use of this phraseology renders the embryonic cell to the status of inanimate object: not human. Thus this "material" can be used for various experiments or for disposal. The truth of the matter is that the embryo is not a "potential human being". The embryo is already human. The more precise language would say that this embryo is a "human being with potential". Just as a single cancer cell is cancer that has the potential to develop into fully developed cancer throughout the body, so too, the human embryo has the potential to develop into a fully developed human person. The lesson; left in the hands of some people, our human words are able to clearly articulate the truth or to twist the truth into a distortion.

Nevertheless, God reveals His greatness in the smallest of details. It is true that the mother and father contribute the human material for the new human being; the genetic matter. God creates the new soul at that time for this new human being. Thus, in our Christian tradition we express the conception of a new human being as procreation. Man and woman work directly with God in the work of creation. This is something beautiful that happens every minute of the day. It is so commonplace that it is hardly noticed as the miraculous event that it is. Yet this is the miracle of new life. God is essentially involved in this miracle. Thus, this new life deserves our genuine respect as well as our prayer of thanksgiving to God.

October is Respect Life Month. We live in a broken sinful world. Humanity is imperfect and flawed. Left to itself, humanity tends to despair; a world without hope. With this in mind, this year's Pro-Life theme is "Called to serve moms in need." Resources and further information can be found on the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) website.

In the midst of this we are reminded that we have a Savior, Jesus Christ. He alone is our Hope for the fullness of life, now and for all eternity. Our prayer for greater respect for the gift of life is an expression of our Hope in the redeeming presence of Christ in our lives. We will continue to pray for greater respect for the gift of life from the moment of conception until natural death because we are moved by Hope in the enduring grace of God in Christ.

Lastly, the month of October is also known as the month of the Rosary. During the month of October, we pray the rosary before our Sunday Masses. You are most welcomed to come to church earlier to join in this prayer. It is a good way to pray for greater respect for the gift of life and to prayerfully prepare oneself for the celebration of the Eucharist.

Have a Blessed Week.
