From the Administrator, Fr. Patrick Behm Week of September 5-10

A few weeks ago, I wrote about how wonderful a habit it is to frequently receive Holy Communion, even on a daily basis, if possible. But, there are times when we ought not receive Holy Communion. As these are often misunderstood, I'd like to address them one by one in a series of columns.

The first of those times is when we have failed to keep the Eucharistic fast. Many people are surprised to learn that the Eucharistic fast is still even a thing! Once upon a time, we were obligated to fast from midnight to the time when we received Holy Communion. Fortunately, that's no longer the case! But, we are still obligated to fast for one hour prior to receiving Holy Communion. Please note that this isn't one hour before Mass, but rather one hour before Holy Communion. So, for a normal weekend Mass, this is a very minimal obligation that the Church asks of us. We need to stop eating, stop drinking everything but water, and stop chewing gum about fifteen minutes or so before we walk in the doors of the church. Again, this is a very minimal obligation that the Church asks us to keep!

Rest assured, if you are sick, or advanced in years, or pregnant or nursing, or need food in order to take medicine, that the Church understands this, and you are not bound to keep the one-hour fast. Medicine also never breaks our fast. There are even some medical conditions where chewing gum is the prescribed treatment. In those cases, that gum is really serving as a form of medicine, so that also wouldn't break the fast.

But, there's good reason as to why the Church asks most of us to observe a one-hour fast before receiving Holy Communion. First, it allows us to be just a little bit hungry when coming forward to receive the Eucharist, reminding us that only Christ can satisfy our true hunger. Second, it's a small act of suffering on our part which we can unite with our Lord's supreme act of suffering in His Passion and death.

I'd humbly ask all of us to be diligent in observing the one-hour Eucharistic fast, and if we've broken it (yes, coffee, gum--aside from the scenario outlined above, and breath mints also break the fast) to abstain from receiving Holy Communion in that Mass.

Blessings,
Fr. Behm
