To the church at Magnesia, blessed with the grace of God the Father in Christ Jesus, in whom I salute you. I send you every good wish in God the Father and in Jesus Christ.

I was delighted to hear of your love of God, so well-ordered and devout, and so I decided to address you in the faith of Jesus Christ. Honored as I am with a name of the greatest splendor, though I am still in chains I sing with the praises of the churches, and pray that they be united with the flesh and the spirit of Jesus Christ, who is our eternal life; a union in faith and love, to which nothing must be preferred; and above all a union with Jesus and the Father, for if in him we endure all the power of the prince of this world, and escape unharmed, we shall make our way to God.

I have had the honor of seeing you in the person of Damas your bishop, a man of God, and in the persons of your worthy presbyters, Bassus and Apollonius, and my fellow-servant, the deacon Zotion; may I continue to take delight in him for he is obedient to the bishop as to the grace of God, and to the presbyters as to the law of Jesus Christ.

Now it hardly becomes you to presume on your bishop's youth, but rather, having regard to the power of God the Father, to show him every mark of respect. This, I understand, is what your holy presbyters do, not taking advantage of his youthful condition but deferring to him with the prudence which comes from God, or rather not to him but to the Father of Jesus Christ, to the bishop of all. So then, for the honor of him who loves us, it is proper to obey without hypocrisy; for a man does not so much deceive the bishop he can see as try to deceive the bishop he cannot see. In such a case he has to reckon not with a man, but with God who knows the secrets of the heart.

We should then really live as Christians and not merely have the name; for many invoke the bishop's name but do everything apart from him. Such men, I think, do not have a good conscience, for they do not assemble lawfully as commanded.

All things have an end, and two things, life and death, are side by side set before us, and each man will go to his own place. Just as there are two coinages, one of God and the other of the world, each with its own image, so unbelievers bear the image of this world, and those who have faith with love bear the image of God the Father through Jesus Christ. Unless we are ready through his power to die in the likeness of his passion, his life is not in us.

—St. Ignatius of Antioch (+ c. 108)

PARISH LIFE

Called to Serve as Christ: Sacred Heart is participating in the Called to Serve as Christ campaign. This landmark campaign is the product of years of study and hard work by clergy, lay leaders, Archbishop Sartain, and archdiocesan staff. All 170 parishes and missions in our Archdiocese will take part in this historic campaign. The focus of the campaign is to strengthen our priest retirement and medical plans, support our women religious and assist our parishes. Detailed information about the campaign goals will be sent to every parish household in the months ahead. Our parish is participating in this campaign beginning in September. We need many volunteers to assist our parish for this campaign to be successful. If you are interested in volunteering and helping our parish in this landmark effort, please contact Father Ross or our campaign co-chairs, Mike Yeend and Phil Gubbins at CTSC.SacredHeart@shbham.org, and we can provide you additional details.

In this struggle, all available weapons must be utilized, and chief among them is prayer. To help strengthen the virtue of chastity, go to learn.covenanteyes.com/novena-for-purity to begin a novena.

Social Justice Corner

July 14 was the memorial of St Kateri Tekakwitha, the first Native American saint of North America. She is a patroness of the environment, environmentalism, and ecology, as well as other causes including orphans, those exiled, those ridiculed for their piety, and for World Youth Day. Learning about human involvement in climate changes seems a fitting way to honor her feast day.

Laudato Si'—Pope Francis' encyclical on the environment and human ecology—teaches that "rather than a problem to be solved, the world is a joyful mystery to be contemplated with gladness and praise" (no. 12); that "human beings, endowed with intelligence, must respect the laws of nature" (no. 68); and that "all of us can cooperate as instruments of God for the care of creation, each according to his or her own culture, experience, involvements and talents" (no. 14)."

We know carbon dioxide present in the atmosphere helps keep our planet warm enough for life. Like an extra blanket on the bed, it traps heat. In the last 100 years we have seen an unprecedented rate of increase in CO2 levels, even though we know they, and subsequently our earth's temperatures, have fluctuated over time. We know the excess is from burning fossil fuels like gas, oil and coal which all emit CO2 when they are burned. Both the earth's air and oceans are warming. In some areas more intense rain storms cause flooding, while in others there is drought.

The amount of CO2 generated by each person is what is meant by "carbon footprint." A follow up Corner article will address ways we can make our carbon footprint smaller.
