How do I dispose of old Bibles and sacramentals?

We've been cleaning out my late mother's house and have discovered a treasure trove of old Bibles, statues, rosaries, and other sacramentals. Is it OK to sell them?

Canon 1171 of the Church's Code of Canon Law says, "Sacred objects are to be treated reverently and are not to be employed for profane or inappropriate use even if they are owned by private persons."

To keep Bibles and sacramentals from being exposed to vandalism, people have traditionally disposed of them by burning them, burying them, and even breaking them apart. All of these methods are acceptable as long as they're carried out with reverence and respect.

To dispose of Palm Sunday palms, donate them to your parish to burn for Ash Wednesday or break them up and burn them yourself.

We're not prohibited from selling religious items, because their spiritual value—like the blessing on a rosary or a Bible—cannot be bought or sold. A person who buys an old rosary, for instance, should have it blessed again because the blessing isn't included in the sale.

My advice is to ask your parish office for suggestions. They may know of a person or organization who can use your items and will treat them as the sacred objects they are.

EIGHTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Our hearts are moved by the enduring generosity and abundant love of God.

The reading from Isaiah affirms that God is always with us, helping us respond to the needs in our lives. In the second reading, Saint Paul asks us to see that absolutely nothing can separate us from the love of God. In the Gospel, we see God's love in action as Jesus, moved by compassion, miraculously feeds all who have gathered.

The truth of our existence is this: God loves us! His dis-position toward us, his sons and daughters, is that we should again and again encounter God's abundant love. Our challenge? How do we respond to such a gift? Will we strive to be as generous as possible with our own resources? Will we be limitless in our forgiveness?
