

From the Principal

“You’re killing me, Smalls.”

In my film class, we watched “The Sandlot” this week. Two things about this, one, many of you parents are not doing their jobs, so many of the kids in my film class have never seen this movie (I’m very disappointed with you all 😞). Second, spring weather is truly “killing me, Smalls,” 70s one day, cold and rainy, in the 40s the next. However, this week of vacation will be reinvigorating and restful as we enter into the final 7 weeks.

Great week last week. We are all putting in the effort and work, preparing for the quizzes, tests, events, and fun that are coming in the remainder of the year.

We are ready to start planning the core courses for next year. Later today, in the evening, I will send another email outlining the core courses available for each grade (electives will be announced in May and June). Please look over the courses with your students next week and talk about classes. On April 29th, during school, we will all fill out the forms as a school.

We have the Academic Awards next week on April 30th and a fun Olympic field day that Friday for our half-day. We are moving and shaking, and although it feels like we are caught in a “pickle” (if you watched Sandlot, you know what a pickle is) of staying focused on school work, warm weather, events, fun, and summer break, we are all doing our best to be the best team players we can.

Have a great break this week.

God Bless STB.
