

100th Anniversary of the Dedication of The Conversion of Saint Paul Church

Dedication

To the parishioners past and present of St. Paul's Church who through their generosity and self sacrifice have built and maintained this church for the past century – and to all who have come closer to God because of this edifice.

We dedicated this souvenir booklet commemorating the 100th year of the existence of this present building.

A special recognition to Rose Valley on her 100th birthday.

My Dear Friends,

As I reflect on the 100th Anniversary of the Dedication of Conversion of St. Paul Church, I have nothing but fond memories. The event was both grace filled and exciting. The actual date of the anniversary was May 24th which was marked by a re-living of the events from exactly 100 years earlier which included Mass with Bishop Kenneth A. Angell, the festive meal at the beach, and the fireworks. A special thanks goes out to the committee for doing a great job planning and coordinating the event.

The Century Auction on August 2nd continued our celebration as we raised $10,000 for the continued up keep of the church. I thank all those who donated items for the event, those who worked the event, and Ron Sanville and Reg Lussier who were the auctioneers that did a marvelous job. A special thanks to Judy Coy and Karen Jarvis who coordinated the event.

Sincerely Yours in Christ,

Rev. Daniel J. Rupp
Administrator

Barton Catholic History

Orleans County Monitor

Monday August 3, 1903

The recent dedication and occupation of the Catholic church by the Catholic denomination naturally calls for a short history of the society in Barton. On account of the records of the early Mission being lost we are unable to obtain exact information concerning the first years of the existence of the society. It appears that about the year 1854 a Mission was organized in this village, and from that time until the present, Catholic meetings have been held here. The first Mass was held at Moses Valley's home, in a tenement under the Kimball store, in the year '51 or '52.

At first, services were conducted in private houses, and about once in four weeks, or perhaps until 1858 longer intervals elapsed between regular services. But the building of the railroad, which was completed to Barton in the autumn of 1857 brought several additional families who were members of the church and strengthened the society. Previous to the organization of the mission the few Catholics who resided in this vicinity attended church at Albany, or at Stanstead, P.Q., but when this mission was started it was more convenient for the people of Glover and Westmore and some adjoining towns to attend here. Among the first members we may mention were Peter Paquette and his sons Joseph, Prudie, and Dustie, Charles Leclare, Moses Valley, Antoine Valley, Moses Damon, Belnay Damon, John Spring, Joseph Brooks, and James Dilley, together with their families. Meetings were held at Charles Leclare's, Joseph Paquette's, Moses Valley's, Antoine Valley's and at other places. A little later Partick Quin, John Hafford, John Keating, Patrick Keating, J.T. Bowler and several others, came to this town, and for some time meetings were held at Partick Quin's house, either Father Doneleau of St. Johnsbury or Father Macaulay or his assistant, Father Raymond, of Stanstead, coming occasionally to hold services somewhere in the mission. The church continued to grow, and the need of a cemetery was keenly felt, as all who died had to be carried either to Stanstead or to Albany for burial. By this reason, Oliver Valley and his brother Joseph in 1878 bought and donated to the church the cemetery located on the road toward May Pond, where many have since found a last resting place. In 1873, a church having been erected at Newport and Father Michaud, (now Bishop) being stationed at that place with his assistant, Father Coathud, took charge of the work here and Catholic meetings were held in the school house hall. Later Fathers Kerlidou, Proul, Yvince, and Clearmont officiated until 1893.

In the year 1878 the society purchased the Congregational church which stood near where the B. & M. passenger station now stands. Here they worshipped for fourteen years when in 1892 the church was moved across the railroad and located on land bought by James Cassidy just east of Mr. Cassidy's residence. It might be well just here to state that largely through the efforts of James Cassidy the land upon which all the buildings now owned by the Catholic denomination was secured. In 1894 the beautiful residence of Melvin Elliott was bought for a parsonage by the society, and two years later the store formerly owned by Barron & Hamblett was purchased and moved on to land near the church. This was fitted up for a hall in which to hold sociables and church entertainments. In 1893 Rev. Joseph Turcot became pastor of the church and from that time until the present has been untiring in his efforts to promote the cause in which he is enlisted. As the congregation had very largely outgrown the old church and all the debts on the church property were liquidated Father Turcot together with many of his prominent members decided that the time had arrived when a new church should be erected, which would meet the present demands of the society.

On Sunday, March 9th 1902, Right Rev. Bishop Michaud of Burlington selected the site, between the parsonage and the hall, on which to erect the new St. Paul's Catholoc church. About a month later work preparatory to laying the foundation was begun by the Valley Brothers, who are prominent members of the denomination. Work was pushed rapidly, and on Sunday, May 18th the exercises on connection with laying the corner stone were attended by a large concourse of people. The services were very impressive. The priests in attendance were Rev. Fr. O'Sullivan of St. Albans, who delivered the address, Rev. Fr. Clermont of Newport, Rev. Fr. Pontbriand of Lyndonville and Rev. Fr. Turcotte of this village. The address was an excellent one: it was filled with inspiring thoughts and was listened to with close attention by the large audience. He spoke of the work which the church is doing throughout the world, of the grand work of the missionaries and what they are doing for the uplifting of humanity. During the address the speaker referred to the interest manifested by other denominations as shown by the large number of Protestants present. At the close of the exercises which, were carried out in accordance with the usual custom of the church, a chance was given all who desired to contribute toward the work. Many availed themselves of the opportunity and $285.29 was donated by the friends present. The stone was the gift of Mr. John Keating of this village, who is a prominent member to the Catholic church. Excellent music was furnished for the occasion by the Barton band.

All through the summer of 1902 and the winter of 1902 and 1903 the work continued under the supervision of foreman George Goodheart. The church being completed dedication, services were held on May 24th and were of universal interest, being attended by people from all denominations who showed their interest both by their presence and their contributions to help the Catholic denomination. Bishop Michaud of Burlington, Rev. Fr. Pontbriand of Lyndonville, Rev. Fr. Clermont of Newport, Rev. Fr. O' Sullivan of St. Albans were present. Rev. Fr. O'Sullivan was the principal speaker and delivered a very fine address. The Right Rev. Bishop Michaud with great solemnity dedicated the church. The bell was also consecrated with suitable ceremony. One hundred sixty children were confirmed on the occasion by Bishop Michaud. Many, both Catholics and Protestants, sounded the bell and made their offering, which in the aggregate amounted to $300.

The church edifice is situated on high land and is the most conspicuous all over the village, its dimensions are 100x48 feet on the ground. The spire stands 121 feet high. The audience room has eight Doric columns to support the roof. Between the pillars an alcove is finished in the roof, while on each side toward the walls the ceiling drops several feet and is finished at right angles, giving a pleasing contrast which heightens the effect. All along in front of the altar which reaches along the end of the church is a balustrade enclosing the altar. The orchestra is built in the front of the church, and is raised, being reached by stairs on each side of the doors at the entrance. There are three aisles, the center one being very broad. There are 90 pews which are made of beautiful grained ash, as is almost the whole interior of the church. A wainscoting reaching up to the windows surrounds the whole interior. At the right of the altar is the confessional, and at the left is the priest's study. Over these are rooms which will accommodate quite a large number of people, when needed, who may by opening the door and windows see and hear the services conducted below. The whole work is done in a workmanlike manner and the impression to those who view it is pleasing in effect. The foundation is most substantial being of large granite blocks nicely fitted. It is doubtful if there is a better foundation for a church anywhere in Vermont than this. The basement is of good height and the two large Fuller & Warren & Co. radiators, which are for wood or coal, are expected to give sufficient heat in the coldest day in winter. High up in the steeple under the spire may be seen the dials and hands of the clock. The dials are nine feet in diameter and the clock can be seen at a long distance, anywhere in the village unless obstructed by trees or buildings. The frescoing of the audience room was done by Mr. George B. Gannon, who is a talented artist. The design of the interior is of Roman style architecture and the decorations correspond throughout. The pillars and arches are treated in yellow olive and delicate tints, set off by elaborate bronze stripings. However the eye is at once attracted to the ceiling and upper portions of the walls, which are beautified by emblems of the Roman church, some fourteen in all and forming a wide border; about the ceiling are panels centered by the design of a cross and rays. The decorations as a whole demonstrate the fine artistic skill of Mr. Gannon.

The bell is from the McShane Bell Foundry, Baltimore Md. It is pitched B flat, has a good tone and being located at such an altitude can be heard a long distance. It cost $300, the late Mrs. Mary Quinn leaving a legacy of $150 towards it.

Some of the stained glass windows are very beautiful and expensive. All of them were contributed by friends of the society. The following are the names of the donors: Bust of St. Paul, gift of the Right Rev. J. S. Michaud; St. Matthew, Rev. P. Campeau of Vergennes; St. Mark, Rev. Proulx of Rutland; St. Luke, Oliver Valley; St. John, John Keating; Sacred Heart of Jesus, Alex Bolduc; Sacred Heart of Mary, George Goodheart. The common windows were contributed by S. Brooks, J. Prance, Jos. Valley, Isreal Valley, Isaac Leclare, Fred Gremoid, Jos. Paquette, D. White, Mrs. Ryan E. Nault, Charles Leclair, Mrs. Dubuc, Alfred Blais, Adelard Blais, Aurelie Demers, Eva Damon, Thomas Bucher, Mrs. J. Hanna, Mr. Mailloux. The church at present time numbers sixty families; church attendance approximates 300 persons on the average. Quite a number of the members of other Catholic churches, who work in the Peerless and at other places, attend meetings here.

Great credit is due to Arthur S. Redfield, who raised the funds to purchase the clock, which is enjoyed by all irrespective of religious sect or denomination. It may be well to state in closing that the cost of the church is $13,000 and those who are judges of public edifices consider this a very reasonable sum for so stately and thoroughly constructed a building.

Barton Parish Celebrates Centennial of Church Dedication

By Cori Fugere Urban Vermont Catholic Tribune

Barton – One hundred years ago parishioners of The Conversion of St. Paul Parish here marked the dedication of their new church with festivities – including fireworks on the shore of nearby Crystal Lake and with a special Mass celebrated by the bishop of Burlington.

On May 24, exactly 100 years later, parishioners marked the centennial of the dedication of their church with festivities – including fireworks – on the shore of nearby Crystal Lake and with a special Mass celebrated by the bishop of Burlington. (The fireworks took place the night before the dedication 100 years ago).

“Throughout one hundred years people have come together to be formed and re-formed as this faith community,” Burlington Bishop Kenneth A. Angell told the congregation of about 250 that filled the church for the centennial celebration. Recalling and celebrating the roots of the parish, he thanked God for the many blessings bestowed upon the parish and for the priests and people who have made up the parish and continue to keep it alive nearly 150 years after Barton was established as a mission.

One of the blessings the bishop mentioned was the parish school, which still operates next to the church. “I ask the Lord to bless you for that school next door. Thank you for supporting that school,” he said. “It is a credit to you people.”

During his homily at the centennial Mass, Bishop Angell spoke of the faith and love of the people of the parish throughout its history, and he looked to the future with hope. “The Lord is still with us. He promised to be so until the end of time,” he said. “And we promise to build on that great edifice of faith that others have begun.”

Six men from the parish have been ordained to the priesthood, one became a religious brother, and nineteen women from the parish became sisters.

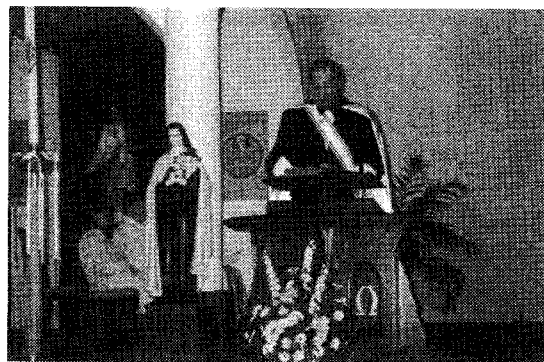

Among the members of the church congregation at the 5:30 pm. Mass, May 24th was 100 year-old Rose Valley whose husband's grandparents gave the granite blocks for the current church's foundation. The longtime parishioner and former Eucharist Minister said she has been very happy in the parish, which she described as “always open for everybody and very pious.”

Born in January 1903, Valley said her faith has been her strength. "I felt I could open up to the Lord and ask Him (for blessings)," she said. "The Lord is good, you know. He'll give you strength."

Cathy Reinstein moved to the parish seven years ago from New York and she has found the people warm, helpful, and welcoming.

Bob Morrill, a parishioner of 13 years, said St. Paul's is a "homey parish" where the people are close knit, church oriented and pull together in times of need.

Music for the Mass was provided by a combined choir from St. Paul's, St. Theresa Church in Orleans and the Barton United Church. Madeleine Roy was the choir director and Jeannine Berard organist. Harpist was Jenny Mayor.

Principal concelebrant of the Mass was Father Daniel J. Rupp, administrator of St. Paul's. Concelebrants of the centennial celebration Mass were: Father Maurice J. Roy, twelfth pastor of the St. Paul's and current pastor of Holy Angels Parish in St. Albans and Father Leopold J. Bilodeau, pastor of St. Mary Star of the Sea in Newport.

A resident pastor in Newport, Father John Stephen Michaud, was named in 1873 to take on the care of Catholics in Barton. In 1878, Catholics in Barton purchased the Congregational church built in 1842 and called it Conversion of St. Paul, reportedly because a Protestant church building was "converted" for Catholic services.

In 1892, the parish church was moved to the property still in possession of the parish, and Father Joseph Turcot became the first resident pastor in Barton the following year. He established a parish school in 1896 and the Sisters of the Assumption came to staff the school in 1907.

Father Turcot received permission to build a larger church to accommodate the growing number of St. Paul's parishioners, and on May 24, 1903, Bishop John S. Michaud – who had served Barton as a parish priest from Newport – dedicated the new church, which cost $13,000. In 1956 Father William Laliberte became the seventh pastor of St. Paul Parish. During his pastorate a new school and convent for St. Paul's was built.

The parish has had 14 pastors.

Father Rupp, parish administrator, said the centennial celebration was "wonderful" and that it culminated more than a year of planning. "We celebrate the faith of all those who came before us, particularly those who built this beautiful building and the faith that accompanies it and is moving to the future."

On the day he dedicated the church, Bishop Michaud also confirmed 160 children and blessed the church bell.

After the centennial celebration Mass, today's parishioners and friends enjoyed a catered dinner under a tent that protected them from the rainy evening at Crystal Lake, a musical performance and fireworks.

"We've been looking forward to this for a long time," commented Marjorie Brown, a member of the centennial committee and parish council. "And the rain didn't keep people away," she added, gesturing to tent full of happy people.

Century Auction

On Saturday, August 2, St. Paul's Church continued its year-long celebration of the 100th Anniversary of the church building by hosting a Century Auction and Raffle. Recognizing that aging buildings inevitably require attention as time passes, all proceeds from this fundraiser helped to establish a Building Maintenance Fund to assist in the preservation of the beautifully restored church.

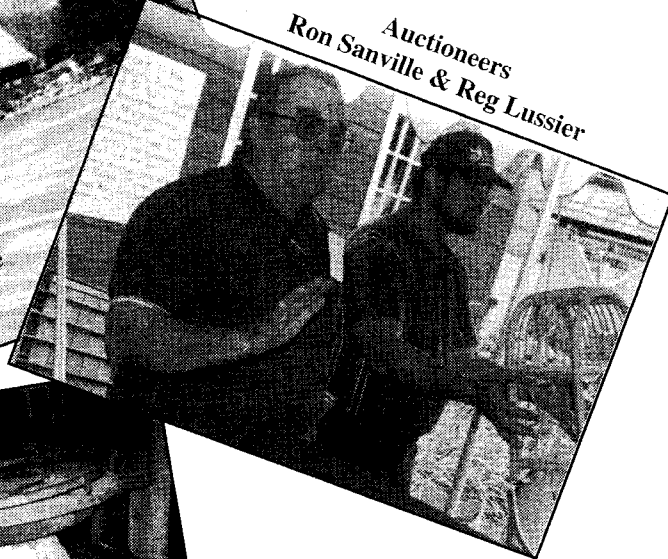

In keeping with the "100-year theme," parishioners were asked to search their closets, attics, and barns for antiques, collectibles, or items with some value, and over 70 families responded generously with over 150 donations. Local businesses were also solicited, and contributed over 75 items and gift certificates for the auction. Several months prior to the auction, a raffle was initiated and over $1000 in tickets were sold for 3 wonderful prizes: a beautiful entertainment center donated by Ethan Allen, a wonderful gift basket loaded with goodies donated by the Barton Village Corner Store, and a gallon of delicious maple syrup donated by Teedle-Lee's Maple Products. The winners of the raffle were announced after the auction. While the public auction was in progress, a Chinese Auction was also conducted as part of the overall fundraiser, and lunch and refreshments were also available.

The Century Auction was an overwhelming success, thanks to the combined efforts of too many individuals to list here: The Auger family, who donated their Sugarmill Farm as the quintessential auction site and also all proceeds from the sale of their Belgian waffles for that day; Fr. Rupp and the coordinators and members of the Auction Planning Committee; Ron Sanville and Reg Lussier, the auctioneers who donated their advice and services; all the individuals and families who so generously gave wonderful items for the auction; the individuals who helped solicit businesses; many, many local businesses who donated items for the auction; everyone who helped on auction Day-those who helped transport items to the auction site and organize the set-up, the runners, food-sellers, recorders, cashiers, and the cleanup committee. And many prayers were answered because a clear, pleasant Auction Day dawned after about three days of cool, rainy weather!

On the day of the Auction, the parking lot at the Sugarmill Farm was packed, and everyone enjoyed the antics of the two auctioneers! Furniture, framed prints, farm implements and old tools, china, silverware, old coins, pottery, old signs, brand new items from local businesses, beautiful collectibles, and even an old wooden-rimmed bicycle and a great old car were auctioned off - something for everyone! The Auction netted slightly over $10,000 after deducting for minimal expenses (advertising, food, miscellaneous supplies, and a tent) - a good start for the Building Preservation Fund!
