DISCOVER THE IMPACT OF DSW

DeSales Service Works (DSW) welcomes volunteers from diverse backgrounds together to contribute to our neighborhood through service, prayer, and learning under the banner of Christ, benefitting all, as Pope Francis puts it, "When you meet the needy, your heart grows bigger." Chinaza was thrilled to be part of the most recent DSW day, helping package diapers for families in need. "I felt very happy participating in the service because I know that I helped some families who are struggling to afford diapers by packaging them." Chibuikem expressed a desire to continue volunteering, "I would love to participate in another DSW because it brings me closer to God and helping others in need." Both gained valuable skills, including how to package a diaper.

Join us for a typical DSW retreat day involving social fun among teens at Holy Infant and community service while sharing Christ's love to organizations across Durham. The rest of Summer 2024 will see DSW at Durham Community Food Pantry, Welcome Baby, and Urban Ministries, and more! Best of all, there is no cost to participate, so do not miss out on these fun opportunities to make a difference, and grow in faith together. Learn more using the QR code.

OFF THE WALL SUMMER MOVIE RECS

Finished those summer reading recommendations already? Well, here are a few summer movie recommendations that, at least tangentially, have some liturgical or music connection:

Book of Life (2014) Directed by Jorge R. Gutierrez for 20th Century Fox While the Pixar flick "Coco" is more well-known, "Book of Life" came first as far as an animated film exploring the traditions around the Day of the Dead and how we keep the memory of our loved ones alive through story-telling and music. The production is vibrant and the music is beautifully integrated into the narrative. It's a bit more gritty and less magical (intentionally), but that serves to draw the viewer into what feels like a pretty "real" world. Lot's of good Catholic themes, symbols, and decisions with consequences that could lead to interesting conversations about belief and mystery and beauty, but also just fun to watch!

Airport (1970) Directed by George Seaton for Universal OK, this is not for the kids, mostly because it will bore them to sleep. Why a summer movie? The whole thing takes place during a snowstorm at night, to trick yourself into cooling off. It's beautifully photographed by legendary cinematographer Ernest Laszlo and the last film score composed by the beyond-legendary Alfred Newman. Burt Lancaster and Dean Martin are the leads (Lancaster called it a piece of junk), but it features a notable cast, including George Kennedy, who would star in each of the sequels (different characters, same name?). It was called "breath-taking in its celebration of anything which used to work when Hollywood was younger and we were all more innocent," yet at the same time innovated a genre still going strong, the disaster movie. "Airport" was the second-highest growing film of 1970, so they were obviously on to something with the bloated cast, ridiculous melodrama, and impending doom (my favorite disaster film is, naturally, about trains, "Disaster on the Coastliner" with William Shatner). There's a priest passenger put in charge of praying (watch the 1975 sequel for the singing nun), but more importantly the film is a snapshot from its era on the quickly-changing attitudes around marriage and family values. To top it off, the hero is a female octogenarian stowaway. Perhaps the aggrandizement of Boeing has not aged well, but a fun watch none-the-less!

The Spitfire Grill (1996) Directed by Lee David Zlotoff for Castle Rock This film was originally produced by the Sacred Heart League, which wanted to make a film that would express Catholic values in the context of an engaging story. After being screened at Sundance, Castle Rock bought the distribution rights for $10 million. Profits from that were used to construct a K-8 school in Mississippi, and a musical adaptation was even produced in 2001. The film is the story of Percy Talbot, just released from prison on parole to begin a new life in the small town of Gilead, Maine. The life of the town revolves around the local grill, where Percy gets a job and tries to fit in with the folks who aren't always welcoming and dealing with their own life-messes. It's a sometimes challenging but beautiful film, with a mystic score by James Horner that effectively conveys its themes of redemption, healing, and sacrifice.

REFLECTING ON THE SCRIPTURE

Amos 7:12-15 - Go, prophesy to my people.

Psalms 85 "Lord, let us see your kindness, and grant us your salvation."

Ephesians 1:3-14 - God chose us in Christ, before the foundation of the world.

Mark 6:7-13 - He began to send them out.

Let us prepare for our own travels to do the Lord's work, for we are his disciples now. Can I accept the challenge the Twelve did? For what do I see myself calling for repentance? To whom can I bring healing?

Next weekend we celebrate the Sixteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time as Jesus is moved with pity for the crowds that follow him as "sheep without a shepherd" and teaches them many things.

FALLING, HEALING, PERSEVERING

I love watching the Tour de France! When I was a senior at DeSales University I joined the cycling team. We competed with many universities around the East coast. I did this primarily so I could claim to be a collegiate athlete for the rest of my life. In reality, I was not much of a competitor, and I cycled because I really enjoyed the sport.

Before my first race, I discovered that it was common practice for cyclists to shave their legs. I'm familiar with this practice from swimmers, but I didn't know why cyclists would do this. No way could hair be that much of a contributor to air resistance, especially at my speeds. I discovered the reason for shaving was different than I assumed. Cyclists shave their legs because they know eventually they will crash and fall. When you fall and scrape your legs on the pavement, those wounds heal much quicker without the added contamination of hair. Not to be too graphic, but it is easier to pull stones out if you don't have hair.

I've never forgotten that lesson that the best cyclists fall. I crashed in Boston for my second race. I healed. Cyclists shave their legs so they can get up and race again.

A similar insight appears from Francis and Jane over and over again. One of my favorite quotes from St. Jane de Chantal captures this concept of falling, healing, and persevering in our love of God and neighbor.

"Should you fall even fifty times a day, never on any account should that surprise or worry you. Instead, ever so gently set your heart back in the right direction and practice the opposite virtue, all the time speaking words of love and trust to our Lord after you have committed a thousand faults, as much as if you had committed only one. Once we have humbled ourselves for the faults God allows us to become aware of in ourselves, we must forget them and go forward."

Falling, healing, and persevering is a constant pattern in my life. I'm happy I learned this lesson in cycling. I know I will fall, but the Holy Spirit is at work to heal and give me the courage to persevere. Keep going.

May God Be Praised!
