Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Zephaniah 2:3, 3:12-12; 1 Corinthians 1:26-31; Matthew 5:1-12a

Rising up from the shores of the Sea of Galilee are a number of gently sloping hills. On the north end of the lake one can look up and see at the top of one hill a lovely church. It is called "Church of the Beatitudes." It is on this hill, tradition has it, that Jesus delivered the now eternal "Sermon on the Mount." The first part of that sermon consists of the eight beatitudes.

It is a very deliberate choice of Matthew to have Jesus go up "on the mountainside" to address the crowds and the disciples. Jesus takes on the mantle, as it were, of Moses. Jesus is the new Moses, the new person who is initiating a new covenant between God and man.

The view back down the hillside toward the lake is beautiful. The grass and trees are lush and green, the lake is a placid blue. One can easily envision Jesus delivering his "inaugural sermon" in that place.

What isn't so placid and peaceful are the stunning words coming from his lips. Blessed, happy, satisfied are: the poor in spirit, the lowly, the mourners, the peacemakers, the persecuted. Can we hear these words afresh? Take them into new ears and new hearts? Be as amazed at them as were those listeners on that hillside over 2000 years ago, hearing the first words of a new covenant?

Next week's readings:

Isaiah 58:7-10; 1 Corinthians 2:1-5; Matthew 5:13-16

Grace brings light to the mind, power to the will, and love to the heart.
