DISCIPLESHIP TODAY

The story of a Divine Redeemer parishioner and his call to serve

Matthew Osche became a parishioner at Divine Redeemer when he began to attend St. James Church in 2022. At the time, Matthew was working as a supervisor in Holy Family's Journey of Hope program for immigrant children who have come to the United States without their parents. He had started working for Holy Family in 2019 after graduating from Penn State with bachelor's degrees in International Politics and Spanish.

In Fall of 2022, Matthew began volunteering for Divine Redeemer's Faith Formation program that prepares students for their Confirmation. He remained the following year to assist with Confirmation prep when the program became Quo Vadis. While volunteering for Quo Vadis, Matthew also taught Sunday School classes for the 6th graders as a part of Divine Redeemer's Family Program. Matthew left Sewickley and Divine Redeemer in the summer of 2024 to serve as a missionary with NET Ministries in Ireland. In Ireland, he travelled the country with a team of other young adults hosting retreats on the Catholic faith for children and teenagers.

Matthew returned to Pittsburgh this past summer to finish his master's degree in Theology and Christian Ministry at Franciscan University of Steubenville Ohio, while he serves full-time with Vagabond Missions in Pittsburgh. Vagabond is a Catholic mission dedicated to sharing the Light of Christ with inner-city teens by forming positive relationships with the youth they serve. They do so by performing outreach in Pittsburgh's inner-city neighborhoods through free youth centers owned by the organization.

Matthew has reached out to the parish to support the mission by asking Divine Redeemer's parishioners to consider supporting him spiritually through prayer, as well as financially by contributing to his mission fund. Any donations given to his mission fund provide him a monthly salary that allows him to dedicate his life full-time to the mission. He is asking parishioners to prayerfully consider making monthly or one-time donations to his mission fund at Vagabond. Thank you for considering supporting him at Vagabond Missions!
