Life stories, faith stories 'full of God's spirit'

LAFAYETTE — Nathan Wiehoff, 25, explored many religions, but happiness was elusive. As he looked around, he felt that there was not a God and labeled himself an atheist.

But on Jan. 6, 2017, he met a woman named Krystle, who became his best friend and led him to the Catholic Church.

"My world just expanded by so much. It's much wonderful more and rich and amazing than I had ever thought," said Wiehoff, a candidate in the RCIA at Nathan St. John Vianney Wiehoff Fishers. Parish, all these people that I love. It was so amazing. I realized I had lived a pretty bad life and was missing out on a Hearing held in House on sex education 'opt in' bill

By Brigid Curtis Ayer For The Catholic Moment

INDIANAPOLIS — A bill to establish the state's sex education program as an "opt in" rather than an "opt out" program received a lengthy hearing in the House Education Committee, Feb. 15.

The bill is expected to pass the panel before the end of February. The plan passed the Senate on Jan. 30 with a vote of 37-12.

The Indiana Catholic Conference supports the bill.

Sen. Dennis Kruse, R-Auburn, author of Senate

Bill 65, said the bill would require schools to make the curriculum on human sexuality available to the public and par-

Destination Jesus

Hundreds of high-school students from across the Lafayette diocese gathered for this year's Destination Jesus retreat, held Feb. 16-18 at St. Theodore Guerin High School in Noblesville. The theme for this year's retreat was "Unconditional."

The weekend offered a variety of activities, including prayer, games, talks by inspirational speakers and contemporary Christian music.

In the wake of Parkland, Florida ews from Parkland, Florida, pries the lid off of a memory. A student shot a teacher two classrooms away from mine. Reports back then indicated that if he could not get to her, he'd get a priest. The teacher survived, but did not teach again. Both of us priests won—der which would have been the secondary target.

Our struggle to figure out school shootings is handicapped by thinking that they are like puzzles. There is no one solution. But we have not fully plumbed the questions, as if we could. Interested parties talk past one another without knowing it.

Yet to be established is what philosophers call a "conversation plane." This is about dialoging on agreed levels, one at a time. Years ago, a book popularized an example of the difficulty in "Women are from Venus, Men are from Mars." Communication about violent acts involving firearms is more complex. It involves whole communities and multiple layers of government.

Let me suggest some of the mixed levels that inform our perspectives. Always a first gambit, some people want to make this a debate about the second amendment to the U.S. Constitution

A second level is about how much force is needed to keep order. There is a long tradition of firearms in hunting for food, for protecting livestock from predators, and watching over one's family when living in relative isolation. Most people can agree on the principles at this level. A third level is mythological. Firearms are part of the American story. While we are 4 percent of the world's population, 42 percent of worldwide firearms in civilian hands are in the United States. I will have to talk to Mom about her thoughts when boys, including me, scouted our neighborhood with toy guns. When I was 7, my small bolt-action M-1 replica rifle was no more out of place than a set of Crayolas. Today, special clothing companies can help us civilians conceal firearms on our persons, almost as if we were accommodating a fifth limb. Maybe the smartphone already enjoys that rank.

In a fourth dimension, we can only observe a paradox. You have heard the expression, "It's impossible to look away from a car wreck." It is hard to look away, then to admit we sometimes don't want to. There is a saying in the news business, "If it bleeds, it leads." Have you noticed how after a mass shooting whole continents seem to disappear from the news for days? Obviously, millions of us are tuning in to witness sad scenes. As much as we don't wish destruction on others, we have to wonder whether we have become violence voyeurs.

Again to the question, how do we "wrap our minds around" awful firearms attacks? I have no comprehensive response. But too many resist bettering our society by staking out a hard position only in logic, law, myth, or a para-lust for graphic tragedy.

It seems sensible to pursue tighter firearms and ammunitions regulation. Might our society's inability to set limits be due to a "disordered affection" from which a Lenten Preface II asks God to free us? There is a spiritual problem staring at us.

Demonizing devices or organizations will not be the most productive tool for insuring safer communities. As we enter adulthood, we find that the most difficult decisions are not between a good and an evil. Rather, the toughest choices are in choosing among goods. The surviving teens in Parkland, Florida, are asking us if we think they are worth making some changes in laws and processes. They want to know if we will back it up when we tell them they are dear to us. So far, they are hearing too many people saying "yes, but ..." They won't forget.

participate in the course.

"If you have to get permission to take a child on a field trip to a museum, then I think it's more important to get permission to teach a class about human sexuality than it is to get permission to go to a museum," Kruse said. "I think asking for parental permission for this reason is merited."

Glenn Tebbe, executive director of the Indiana Catholic Conference, testified in support of the legislation.

"God entrusts children to parents," Tebbe said. "Parents have the responsibility to form and pro- Glenn vide an integral education for their children.

"Parents have a particular responsibility in the area of sexual education," he added. "Children should be taught the meaning of sexuality and it is important that they learn to appreciate the human and moral values connected with it.

"Parents have an obligation to inquire about the methods used for sexual education in order to verify that such an important and delicate topic is dealt with properly," Tebbe said. "Senate Bill 65 enables parents to fulfill their responsibilities in the development of their children as responsible and moral adults.'

Monica Boyer, founder and president of the Indiana Liberty Coalition, a pro-life, pro-family group located in northern Indiana, also spoke in support of the bill.

Boyer said her organization was contacted by grandparent in Marshal County, who said a school showed students a 30-minute YouTube video promoting same-sex attraction as normal, and that one's gender identity can be chosen, as part of sex education. Parents were not notified in advance.

Rhonda Miller, education chair of the Indiana Liberty Coalition, shared some of the human sexuality curriculum being taught in schools across Indiana.

She referenced a flyer "Making a Differwhich offers an ence." "abstinence" curriculum. However, the education lists explicit sexual activities as 'abstinence."

Other materials used in Indiana schools also offer explicit definitions of sex acts.

One pamphlet, "Making Proud Choices," teaches students how to use contraception and offers students games and methods for doing so.

Miller said some sex education handbooks being used suggest students "role play sexual encounters."

For these reasons, Miller urged lawmakers to pass Senate Bill 65 to "give parents a voice.

Micah Clark, director of the American Family Association of Indiana, a pro-family organization based in Indianapolis, said in the 27 years he's been an advocate for families, he's received dozens of calls from parents about schools delivering material of a sexual nature which conflicted with their values without their knowledge or consent.

This is nothing more than a 'parents right to know' bill. They have a right to know about material being presented on this sensitive topic beforehand," Clark said.

Rep. Vernon Smith, D-Gary, and Rep. Sheila Klinker, D-Lafayette, former educators who serve on the House Education Committee, raised concerns about the "opt in," saying they preferred the "opt out" method.

Smith said he felt the bill would hurt more students than it would help, and worried about children in sexual abuse situations.

Current law allows parents to request an "opt out" of sex education. Parents may request sex education curriculum be provided to them, and have their child removed from the class.

Indiana law does not specify what may or may not be covered in sex education classes, and there is no requirement to alert parents that such material will be taught.

Indiana Department of Education (IDOE) officials said most schools do inform parents. The IDOE has not taken a position on Senate

Dr. Mary McAteer, a board-certified pediatrician representing the Indiana Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics, testified in opposition to the bill.

She said she had concerns about the written consent portion of the bill. McAteer said while the academy agrees that parents should be fully informed, she called the "opt in" burdensome for families who are in "chaotic circumstances."

The Indiana State Teachers Association was among other groups opposed to the

The House panel decided on Feb. 15 to hold the bill for a least another week to allow further discussion and possible amendments.

Life stories, faith stories 'so full of God's spirit'

He joined catechumens and candidates from the Carmel and Fowler deaneries at a combined Rite of Election and Call to Continuing Conversion held at the Cathedral of St. Mary of the Immaculate Conception on Feb. 18.

The Lafayette, Logansport and Muncie deaneries will send catechumens and candidates to rites at the cathedral on Feb. 25.

The Rite of Election includes the enrollment of names of all the catechumens by signing the Book of the Elect.

Candidates, previously baptized Christians, will be confirmed and receive the Eucharist at Easter. During the rite they are presented to and blessed by their bishop.

In his homily, Bishop Timothy L. Doherty said that in his early ministry he helped with the RCIA.

"I found the life stories and faith stories so very different from each other. They were so profound, so full of God's spirit," he said. "It was just amazing how many different ways God had worked in people's lives to bring them to him, first of all, and to bring them to him in the Catholic Church.

"It was amazing to pay attention to where grace was at work in people and how profoundly they had experienced the grace of God in different ways," Bishop Doherty said.

People hear God coming from different places sometimes out of joy, sometimes out of tragedy or loneliness, he said. People hear God in different ways throughout their lives.

"So the story of someone who is 20 will be different than someone who is 40 or 60 who has a few miles on them," Bishop Doherty said with a smile. "It's important to see how God can work in each one of those areas. The whole community becomes the beneficiary. The whole people "When have everything in life they still have a hunger, an emptiness they know that only God can Bishop Doherty said. "We are part of a world where there is suffering and discord. We are in a church where all the members aren't perfect. You join a noble group of sinners who are made a little less awful because the Lord loves them unconditionally. We look at the Lord's example and pray to be able to love each other; if not unconditionally, then more than we might if we lacked God's grace and help.

"With God's grace I can promise you will come to deeper understandings of what it is that God sees in you and a deeper understanding of what you can see in Christ," he said. "It all starts with prayer. And it gets really ignited in the presence of our fellow believers, in the course of our sacraments, and in the course of our prayers togeth-pastor.

"Sometimes he would help me out with Bible verses to help my point of view," he said. "I learned more and more about the Catholic faith in RCIA class and I have been called to attend every class since 2013. I am honored, blessed and very humbled to be a sponsor."

Youngbok Hong and her daughter, Selin Oh, 17, are joining the church together at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish, Carmel.

Hong grew up in Korea and was baptized as a Catholic when she was a teenager.

"I moved to the United States 15 years ago," she said. "I grew up in a Christian environment, but as a teenager I had a lot of unresolved questions. My daughter and I decided to learn about the Catholic Church and it has been a blessing for us. It has been quite a journey and a special time to do this with my daughter."

"After attending a big church in Carmel, I didn't feel spiritually fulfilled so I started a discussion with my mom," Oh said. "We had a lot of questions about spirituality. Since she already had ties to the Catholic Church, we started the RCIA process together. It gives you a lot to think about, and answers to questions that have been asked for thousands of years."

Rex Adams and his wife, Melinda, with daughters Grace

When Rex Adams, a member of Sacred Heart, Remington, married Catholic, he agreed to raise any children in the Church.

"Now after four children and 21 years of marriage, I finally have enough time to do this," he said. "I was raised in the Baptist Church and didn't like how they ranted and raved about things. I went to church with my family all these years and really like the organization of the Catholic Church."

Thomas W. Allegrini and his wife, Darcy, have been married for three years.

"I was raised Methodist, but my grandfather and dad were Catholic," he said. "I started going to church (at Sacred Heart, Remington) with my wife five years ago. I got to know the people and the priest and it's been something I really enjoyed. We were thinking it would be good to join the Church before we start a family. It will help us grow as a family and as a couple."

The rites were coordinated by the diocesan Office of Divine Worship and Liturgical Formation, directed by Jonathan Sullivan.

A reception followed the Mass in Bishops Memorial Hall and was served by members of the Altar and Rosary Society of the cathedral parish.

Hundreds of teens gather for Destination Jesus 2018

'Our hope is when they walk out, they never doubt his love'

By Jesica E. Hollinger
The Catholic Moment

NOBLESVILLE — Unconditional. One small, powerful word used to mark the theme of the "Destination Jesus" retreat for high-school students on Feb. 16-18 at St. Theodore Guerin High School.

Hundreds of students from across the diocese gathered to deepen their faith and strengthen their relationship with Christ, as they learned of God's neverending love for each of them.

Bishop Timothy L. Doherty celebrated Mass on Saturday morning, offering a homily related to the weekend's readings from Isaiah, reminding the students to speak respectfully to one another, contrary to the current trend of sarcasm and snide retorts.

Bishop Doherty also told the students that he was heartened by their attendance.

"This event is so inspiring — not just for me, but for all of our devoted students who have chosen to spend an entire weekend deepening their relationship with Christ," he said.

"I am extremely confident in the future of the Catholic Church, as these bright and talented students, led by a love for Christ, grow and develop into tomorrow's leaders," he added.

Throughout the weekend, the students — along with priests, seminarians and women religious from around the Diocese of Lafayette-in-Indiana — engaged in a variety of activities, including prayer, games, food, talks by inspiring speakers, and contemporary Christian music.

Matt Fletcher, a sophomore at Guerin Catholic High School, said he was at the retreat to get away from the secular world for a short time, and have a chance to improve his faith life and be closer to Jesus.

"I hope to always remain a good Catholic and stay close to God throughout my life. No matter what career path I choose, I hope I will be able to do that and help other people convert, or stay closer to God," Fletcher said.

Natalia Trevino Amaro, a high-school senior from Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Parish in Carmel, said her first trip to the retreat as a freshman had a lasting impact on her faith life during high school.

"I love this retreat — it's the retreat that brought me to my faith originally," Trevino Amaro said.

"It's only fitting that I'm here my last year of high school, so I can end strong and take my faith off to college," she added.

Reagan Ney, a senior at Guerin Catholic, said she hopes to pass down her experiences to those coming for the first time, this year.

"Like Natalia, I've come all four years and I hope to pass down my experiences to the sophomores and freshmen, so they can be part of what I have enjoyed so much in the past," Ney said.

Friends since they met

Friends since they met during their first retreat their freshman year of high school, both Ney and Fletcher agreed they felt changed by their experiences at Destination Jesus, especially with a deepened love and regard for the Holy Eucharist.

"This retreat (my freshman year) was what originally brought me to my faith. To be honest, before that, I wasn't really involved in it," Trevino Amaro said.

"I was forced to come here my freshman year — my mother made me go — it wasn't an option.

"The experience of adoration on Saturday night touched my heart so much, and after that I had this desire to grow closer to God, so I started going to youth group, attending retreats, and going to Mass more often.

"I had a conversion of heart, through my experience of adoration, which has helped me continue my Catholic faith during my high-school years," she added.

"I've gained a bigger devotion to the Eucharist, through Destination Jesus," Ney said. "I've learned how to pray more often, and different ways to pray. Now, I write in a journal whenever I go to adoration and I've started sharing my knowledge with other people.

"It's been a journey of different events and different thing happening, as I've grown to love and appreciate Eucharistic adoration, and even share my knowledge at a church retreat," she said.

For many of the students who attended, it's a joy to have the opportunity to be with people their own age, who share their Catholic faith and common values.

As a student who doesn't attend a Catholic high school, Trevino Amaro said it's often hard to find people who share the same faith.

"It's nice to come here and find people from your own school that you didn't know were Catholic and didn't know were so devoted, like you are; you come here, share that, then go back to school and become friends," she said.

Many of the students at the retreat mentioned the role that youth ministers in their home parishes have in nurturing their faith, as well as encouraging them to try new experiences.

"I want to thank my youth minister, Emily Sipes, at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, because she always pushes us to try new things," Ney said. "She helps our youth ministry grow closer to one another, even though we go to different schools and don't really know each other.

"It's really nice to have a community to be involved with," she added.

Trevino Amaro said she was grateful for her youth ministers at Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Parish, Louis and Rebecca Paiz, who always push the students to grow more in faith, by attending retreats and gaining new experiences.

Paiz said planning and executing a retreat like Destination Jesus takes about 1,000 volunteers to be successful.

"From the people that plan the events and the logistics throughout the entire year (prior to the event) to the people who set up, tear down, serve in the kitchen, stay up all night, and participate in the events ... it takes so many devoted volunteers coming together to make this work," Paiz said.

All of the planning is considered a success if the students walk away from the retreat never doubting God's love for them.

"The theme is 'Unconditional' and our hope is that these students encounter the Lord's unconditional love in such a depth when they walk out, they never doubt his love and that they can live in his love," she said.

"As we were planning this year's event, one of the things that kept coming up was the high amount of stress our young people are encountering.

"With that stress comes a deep hunger and we can fill that hunger with other things to help cope with the high anxiety and stress."

"Through their encounters this weekend, we hope students find the answer to all of it, which is Christ — his deep love for us and then the gift of the sacraments, through which we continue to receive the Lord's grace and mercy," she added.

One of the factors that makes Destination Jesus such a significant event is the 40-hour exposure to the Blessed Sacrament, throughout the entire weekend. For some students, this is an original experience.

The students also had several breakout sessions, including speakers that addressed the young men and young women about living in this world as a son or daughter of Christ, and what it means to live in that identity.

This year marks the 23rd year of Destination Jesus, whose original mission lives on to continue to invite students to expand their relationship with Jesus through the Blessed Sacrament, inspire a deep to devotion to Mary, encourage fidelity to the teachings of the Catholic Church and the Magisterium, and awaken discernment of holy vocations.

Fruitful Harvest 2016

Since its inception in 1984, the funds gathered in the biennial Fruitful Harvest appeal have provided operating funds needed to help meet the expenses of diocesan ministries, as well as obligations of the diocese to the national and Universal Church. Millions of dollars also have been returned to parishes and school trust funds.

Fruitful Harvest is comparable to the weekly collection upon which parishes depend to meet their responsibilities. Instead of a weekly appeal, the diocesan Church seeks support through this biennial appeal.

Each parish is assigned a campaign goal based on a formula that factors in parish population and offertory income. As soon as a parish reaches its goal in paid pledges, it gets a 10 percent rebate.

In addition, most parishes receive half of all funds received that exceed their goal. Parishes with schools receive an additional 42 percent for their school trusts, for a total of 92 percent of all overage.
