PARISH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fr. Octavio Trejo-Flores, S.D.S.

John 1: 35-42 | The First Disciples

We read in our first reading and Gospel for the Second Sunday in Ordinary that it is always God who calls first. In fact, it is God who reveals Himself first and calls the one who has been chosen. This revelation from God has always felt like a mysterious call perceived in the depths of the heart. And in response to this call from the Lord, we find Eli who advises us to be open to what the Lord asks: "Speak, LORD, for your servant is listening."

We also read in today's Gospel that the Evangelist John emphasizes that it was four o'clock in the afternoon when Andrew and John saw Jesus passed by, and they followed Him. Then, Jesus asked them, "What are you looking for?"

Note that Jesus is not requesting information, He is calling them. The two disciples reply with their own question, "where are you staying?" They are not asking Jesus for His address. They want to know more than just where Jesus lives, they want to know the place where He 'dwells,' the place of His heart. And Jesus replies, "Come and you will see." And their lives were forever changed.

God does not wait until we are perfect to follow Him. God knows that we are all human beings with faults and defects. God knows we are going to make mistakes along the way. And yet, God still calls us in the tranquility of your workplace, in your kitchen, in the classroom, in the garden, or on the road God calls us: "Come and you will see." Amen.
