From the Pastor

Love is a frustrating thing. All the great books, poets, filmmakers tell us so. Why? Because love is an intangible. We can't define or describe it. It can't be touched or tasted. It's a feeling of euphoria, or affection, or good humor toward others. See? undefinable, at least according to the world's standards.

So when we read yet another scripture passage with Jesus talking about love, it's enough to make us groan and say oh no, not love again. Give us something concrete. This love thing, it's too vague. But that's the great lesson Jesus is trying to impart. Love is tangible. Love is care-taking others: feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, nursing the sick. Love is filling the hole of need right in front of you, with time, with labor, with food, with money. Love is doing the work God has called us to. Emotion and affection are fine things, but love, as defined by God, is the work that will change the world.

You've got two hands, go on, get busy, love somebody.
