Reign of Terror Revisited

Cardinal Roger Mahony
Archbishop Emeritus of Los Angeles

October 20, 2025

We are deeply grateful to our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIV, for his unwavering call to the Bishops of the United States: to raise our prophetic voices in defense of immigrants and all those suffering under the weight of injustice. His words remind us that silence is complicity—and that the Church must stand where Christ stands: with the poor, the persecuted, and the displaced.

I. Historical Echoes of Fear and Violence

The French Reign of Terror (1793–1794) was a radical and violent phase of the Revolution, aimed at purging enemies of the new republic.

Over 16,000 were executed by guillotine, and thousands more perished through extrajudicial killings. Nobles, clergy, moderates—even fellow revolutionaries—were swept up in political purges. Civil liberties were suspended. Trials were expedited. Fear and paranoia gripped the nation. The ideals of liberty, equality, and fraternity were eclipsed by suspicion and bloodshed.

Social fragmentation followed. Families and communities were torn apart. The Terror left a deep scar on France’s political culture and paved the way for Napoleon’s rise as a stabilizing force.

II. America’s Recurring Reigns of Terror

Though not marked by guillotines, our own nation has endured waves of anti-immigrant hostility that mirror the same destructive forces: fear, ideology, and scapegoating. These episodes have inflicted deep wounds on immigrant communities and betrayed our national identity as a land of welcome.

Consider the historical record:

- The Chinese Exclusion Act (1882) barred Chinese laborers and denied citizenship.
- The Know Nothing Party (1850s) opposed Catholic immigrants from Ireland and Germany.
- The California Alien Land Laws (1913, 1920) denied land ownership to Japanese and other Asian immigrants.

- The Tydings-McDuffie Act (1934) reclassified Filipinos as aliens, stripping rights.
- The Internment of Japanese Americans (1942–1945) uprooted families and livelihoods.
- Post-9/11 policies targeted Muslim and Arab communities with surveillance and profiling.
- Family separations and detention centers have traumatized Latin American migrants in our own time.

These are not isolated incidents. They form a pattern—a recurring reign of terror against the vulnerable.

III. The Church's Prophetic Mandate

Pope Leo recently reminded a gathering of U.S. bishops and immigrants:

This assault on immigrants is not merely a historical or sociopolitical concern. It is a theological imperative. As bishops and pastoral leaders, we must speak from the heart of Scripture:

- The Old Testament reveals God's enduring preference for the alien and the stranger.
- The Gospels show Jesus lifting up the voiceless, the outcast, and those maligned by civil authorities.

We must not merely lament injustice—we must confront it.

IV. The Present Crisis

Today, immigrants are chased from farms and ranches, car washes and restaurants. They are arrested at immigration courts while seeking legal status. They are targeted for the color of their skin and the language they speak.

In Los Angeles, we hear their cries. Families live in fear. Children weep as they leave home, uncertain if their parents will be there when they return. Work is abandoned. Incomes vanish. Dignity erodes.

Millions of immigrants in our parishes are desperate, caught in a modern reign of terror.

But it is not only immigrants who suffer.

- Medicaid recipients face soaring premiums and drastic service cuts. Ten million will lose coverage by 2034.
- Rural clinics are closing. The Affordable Care Act changes will strip coverage from 5.1 million. A reign of illness terror looms.

- Nutrition programs like SNAP and WIC are imperiled by $1.5 trillion in federal cuts. Hunger will rise. Non-profits will be overwhelmed. Children will suffer most.

This is not policy—it is persecution. It is not reform—it is terror.

V. A Call to Action

In this Jubilee Year of Hope, we are summoned to respond—not with timidity, but with courage, clarity, and compassion.

Our Conference has a legacy of prophetic leadership:

- In 1983, amid nuclear escalation, we issued The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and Our Response—a Letter that resonated worldwide.
- In 1986, facing economic injustice, we released Economic Justice for All: A Pastoral Letter on Catholic Social Teaching and the U.S. Economy, a pastoral letter that placed the value of the human person above profit.

Now, Pope Leo calls us again: to defend the identity and integrity of every human person.

Let us speak with Gospel fire. Let us act with pastoral zeal. Let us ensure that the Church remains a beacon of justice, mercy, and hope in a land shadowed by fear.
