Propers for Sunday10:00 AM

Introit - The Spirit of the Lord has filled the whole world, alleluia; and that which contains all things, knows every language spoken by men, alleluia, alleluia. Let God arise, and let his enemies be scattered; and let those who hate him flee before his face.

Alleluia - Send forth your Spirit and all things shall be created anew; and you shall renew the face of the earth.

Alleluia - Come Holy Spirit; fill the hearts of your faithful people, and enkindle in them the fire of your love.

Offertory - Confirm, O God, that which you have accomplished in our midst; from your holy temple which is in Jerusalem, kings shall offer presents to you, alleluia.

Communion - Suddenly, a sound came from heaven like the rush of a mighty wind, in the place where they were sitting, alleluia; and they were filled with the Holy Spirit, and announced the great things God had done, alleluia, alleluia, alleluia.

Support the AMDG Foundation, an Apostolate of the Canons Regular of St. John Cantius, in their fundraising for a new organ, the Opus II at St. Peter's.

The AMDG Foundation is working alongside Saint John's Abbey Organ Builders to build this brand new organ specifically designed for St. Peter's Church. The Opus II will allow our music program to continue the dedicated work in the restoration of the sacred and a commitment to excellence in sacred music.

On Time and Timelessness

The Divine Office is tied to the rhythms of the day, but also exists outside of it. Through its use of the Psalms and readings, which reflect the seasons and the liturgical year, it embodies what the Church calls Kairos, the meeting between eternity and historical time.

It has a tidal movement, like the sea. After the late-night vigil, dawn arrives and the Church sings Lauds. This is the hour of praise, when all things become new. During the day, the faithful pause for the Midday Prayer (and sometimes more often), then continue until Vespers, which comes around 6:00 PM. Lauds and Vespers are known as the “hinge hours,” bringing in and then seeing out the day, much like the morning and evening tide.

Echoing this sense of movement are the prayers themselves. In the morning we usually hear the Laudate Psalms, which rejoice in God’s creation. “Let the sea and all within it, thunder,” Psalm 97 says, “the world and all its peoples. Let rivers clap their hands, and the hills ring out their joy.” By evening, the prayers are quieter, more reflective, following a trajectory of light to dark, life to death.

Yet the Divine Office isn’t really about this world – it’s a meditation on the mystery of Christ, using words that encompass thousands of years of dialogue between God and the individual soul, between members of the Church, and between the Church and the world. One hears these voices, speaking of Christ’s birth, life, death, and Resurrection, in a continuous cycle. The Divine Office follows the liturgical year that begins with Advent and ends with Christ the King, but it also follows daily and four-week cycles that constantly renew themselves. This is not our sense of time, but God’s.

It takes an individual far outside himself, as it’s meant to. We pray the Divine Office – the Opus Dei – in communion, anticipating the Beatific Vision that comes at the end of time. Along with the Mass, this is the prayer that binds Heaven and earth, the living and the dead. This is why the Divine Office is best experienced in a sacred space, with the living voices chanting eternal words, one choir alternating with the other, in that same, tidal rhythm.

The Divine Office sanctifies our time in this earthly life, keeping us close to God in the midst of distractions. We think of God readily enough in the darkness, but our daily routines often block Him out, and we’re more apt then to make false gods out of trivial things.

As we’ll see next week, the prayers of the Divine Office continually call us back to a different kind of living. Its structure helps us let go, and opens our hearts to the Word.
