First Reading: Ez 47:1-2, 8-9, 12

Ezekiel recounts the vision where he observed a stream of water flowing from the threshold of the temple and growing in force until it is a mighty river. These waters miraculously purify all stagnant waters, allowing living creatures to thrive within them. The saving power of God flows from the temple. The power of the presence of God radiates throughout creation.

Responsorial Psalm: Ps 46

Mountains, symbols of strength and stability, can still quake and crumble. God, on the other hand, is secure. The psalm calls all to behold the marvels of God, which should instill both gratitude and confidence in their hearts.

Second Reading: 1 Cor 3:9c-11, 16-17

Paul characterizes the community at Corinth as the temple of God. Speaking without pride but from the humble acknowledgment of God's goodness, he declares that by the grace of God he was chosen to be the wise architect responsible for the temple. He laid the foundation, which is Christ.

G.G.

When we eat this Bread and drink this Cup, we pro - need for merchants in the house of the Lord. By driving the merchants out of the temple precincts, Jesus announces that the time of fulfillment has come. Identifying God as his Father affirms his right to make such a claim and to act in accord with it.
