SEEING GOD IN EVERYTHING & EVERYONE by Deacon Ken Snyder

Several years ago I read a book by Father Richard Rohr that talked about Christians needing to develop what he called a 'third eye'. Fr. Rohr used the example of a sunset to explain what he meant. Through our 'first eye', we see and appreciate the beauty of the sunset. Through our 'second eye' we see the natural laws that govern the sunset: the earth's rotation and orbit, the particles in the atmosphere, the sun's rays that create those vivid colors, and so on. And what we should see in that sunset through our 'third eye' is God's hand, God's creating power, God's providence and purpose, God's love in the beauty and life-giving energy that sun provides to us and all life on earth.

I was thinking about this 'third eye' concept a few weeks ago when I had the privilege of seeing several spectacular sunsets while vacationing on the shore of Lake Michigan. But what I came to realize was how easy it is to see God's presence in the warm breezes and golden sunsets of a Michigan summer, and how difficult it is to see those same things in the crown of creation, in God's masterpiece, the human person who has been created in God's image and likeness.

'People are the worst'. We've all heard this or something similar—we may have even said it. And who can blame us? Each day's news cycle brings stories about shootings, stabbings, senseless violence, and unimaginable cruelty—all committed by living, breathing, sentient humans, just like us. And beyond that we have our own interactions and experiences with the nosey neighbor, the needy co-worker, the selfish friend, the rude cashier, and countless others who annoy us, who let us down time after time.

But while all that may be true, we are Christians: we are followers of Jesus, who we call Lord. And when it came to this topic, our Lord was very clear: 'This I command you: love one another' (Jn 15:17). There are no 'excepts' in those words, as in, except when they are annoying or rude, or when they have done evil things. In fact, there are no exceptions at all to this command of Jesus.

Love one another, as Christians, this is our call; this is the work of our lives. And so, one way to become a little better is to try to see our brothers and sisters in Christ with our 'third eye' - to see God's creating power, God's providence and plan, and God's love in everyone we meet during our time on this Earth. May God's grace open our eyes and awareness of the divine providence, purpose, and love that is present in the world He has created, and in our brothers and sisters, who we are called to see and to love as Jesus did.
