Holy See: Ensure the peaceful use of energy

By Vatican News staff reporter

In an address during the Tenth Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, Archbishop Gabriele Caccia, the Vatican's Head of Delegation underlined the Holy See's position, stating that atomic energy must only be used for peaceful purposes.

The archbishop said that the Holy See "takes this opportunity to reaffirm its commitment to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and urges State Members to strengthen support for the Agency."

He noted the contribution nuclear technology has made to sustainable development by treating cancer, improving crop yields, managing and protecting water supplies, and monitoring ocean pollution.

"Capacity building partnerships between developing countries and the IAEA have enabled nearly all States to benefit from such applications," the archbishop said.

However, he pointed out that despite these accomplishments, "the spread of nuclear technology has not occurred without problems, and some very grave problems."

"Ensuring the peaceful use of nuclear energy means that nuclear energy, medicine, and research facilities must not be targeted in war, which could turn such sites into sources of proliferation, create "dirty bombs," or radiologically contaminate local communities and the environment, harming present and future generations," the archbishop stressed.

In light of this, he continued, "the Holy See first recalls that Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions prohibits attacks against nuclear power plants and urges that the protection of civilian objects be kept high on the international agenda, including the protection of nuclear facilities."

He also underlined that "Such efforts must also respond to the secondary consequences of war and conflict, which linger long after guns fall silent."

In a bid to protect our common home, said the archbishop, "the peaceful uses of nuclear technologies must be considered in an integral fashion, not with a siloed, technocratic approach."

He went on to say that "pursuing integral human development requires addressing the social, environmental, and health impacts of technologies."

Archbishop Caccia pointed out that potential new inventions in nuclear energy "suggest the promise of providing climate-neutral energy without harmful impacts to health, the environment, and future generations."

Furthermore, he underlined, "States should take steps to remediate environments negatively affected by nuclear accidents and uranium mining, assist communities suffering from such effects, and agree on long-term storage solutions for high-level radioactive waste."

The archbishop also urged States to work together in pursuing the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

In this regard, he added, "the Holy See welcomes the opening of the IAEA Low Enriched Uranium Bank in Kazakhstan and calls for greater efforts to multilateralize the nuclear fuel cycle, especially those portions of which pose the greatest threats to proliferation."

Concluding his address, Archbishop Caccia emphasized that current and future generations "deserve a peaceful world order based on the unity of the human family, grounded on respect, cooperation, solidarity and compassion."

He also stressed that "now is the time to counter the logic of fear with the ethic of responsibility, and so foster a climate of trust and sincere dialogue."

The Queenship of the Blessed Virgin Mary

August 22 is the Feast of The Immaculate Heart of Mary, in the Traditional Calendar and the Queenship of Mary.

On the 11th OF October 1954, Pope Pius XII established the Feast of the Queenship of Mary to be celebrated throughout the world, and commanded that on that day each year, the world should renew its consecration to her. In the future the Feast came to be celebrated on 22nd of August.

"The purpose of the Feast is that all may recognize more clearly and venerate more devoutly the merciful and motherly sovereignty of her who bore God in her womb" (Ven. Pius XII, Ad. Coeli Reginam).

Safeguard the Children Did you Know?

Monitoring your children on YouTube

YouTube is one of the most popular sites for children, and anyone can upload and share videos about anything. YouTube can showcase creativity and foster learning and connection for children, but it is also home to a variety of dangerous and inappropriate content. It is the user's responsibility to filter the content he or she sees, and often, children don't have the ability or knowledge to filter their viewing before it's too late. Talk to your children about what they want to watch, and what they are and are not allowed to do while on YouTube. Pope Francis: 'May Mary guide the destiny of Europe and the world'

By Vatican News staff reporter

Pope Francis prays for Mary to guide the destiny of Europe and the world, help us put Christ and the Gospel first, and reiterates that his thoughts are always with war-torn Ukraine and its suffering people.

"May the Black Madonna help guide the destiny of Europe and the world."

The Holy Father expressed this prayer during his Wednesday General Audience in the Vatican when addressing Polish-speaking faithful and pilgrims present.

The Pope remembered the thousands of pilgrims making a pilgrimage to the shrine of Jasna Góra in recent days, praying for peace and reconciliation in the world. He recalled that among them are many Ukrainians "who have found in your country a hospitable home."

"We entrust the destiny of Europe and the world to the Black Madonna. I bless you from my heart."

Pope Francis said his thoughts always go toward war-torn Ukraine. As the war continues to wage on after the Russian invasion of its neighbor, the Holy Father repeated his appeal not to forget that suffering people nor grow accustomed to the war.

"My thoughts, as always, go to Ukraine: let us not forget that martyred people."

The Pope has made countless appeals for the country and has offered to do anything possible to help bring an end to the war. He has expressed repeatedly his interest in going to both Moscow and Kyiv and has reiterated the Holy See's availability to help with mediation.

The Pope prayed that young people, elderly and newlyweds, let Mary actively work in their lives just days after the recently-celebrated Solemnity of the Assumption.

"May Mary help everyone to always put Christ and the Gospel first."

The Pope said Our Lady's Feast Day "invites us to live our worldly journey, with dedication, constantly oriented toward eternal goods."

After the Pope spent his Audience stressing the link between the elderly and the young having the power to save humanity, toward the end of the Audience, a little boy unexpectedly ran up to the Pope on the stage and stayed beside him a while.

The Holy Father greeted with particular affection the Sisters of the Immaculate Conception from Buenos Aires who are celebrating their General Chapter. "Lets pray for Vocations."

Santa Sede: No a los ataques a centrales nucleares

Los Estados colaboren en la búsqueda de usos pacíficos de la energía nuclear. En su intervención en la conferencia de la ONU sobre el Tratado de No Proliferación de Armas Nucleares que se celebra en Nueva York del 1 al 26 de agosto, el arzobispo Gabriele Caccia, jefe de la delegación de la Santa Sede, reiteró su convicción de que la energía atómica sólo debe utilizarse con fines pacíficos

"Las instalaciones de energía, medicina e investigación nucleares no deben ser objetivos en las guerras". Lo dijo monseñor Gabriele Caccia al explicar que podrían transformar estos lugares en fuentes de proliferación de armas, de creación de "bombas sucias" o contaminar con sustancias radiactivas a las comunidades locales y el medio ambiente, perjudicando a las generaciones presentes y futuras".

La Santa Sede recuerda que "el Protocolo I de las Convenciones de Ginebra prohíbe los ataques contra las centrales nucleares e insta a mantener la protección de los bienes civiles como prioridad en la agenda internacional, incluida la protección de las instalaciones nucleares". El jefe de la delegación de la Santa Sede hizo estas declaraciones al intervenir en la Conferencia de Revisión del Tratado de No Proliferación de Armas Nucleares de la ONU que se celebra en Nueva York del 1 al 26 de agosto.

Hoy en día hay un total de 440 reactores nucleares en el mundo, una quinta parte de la energía global a baja emisión de carbono, crucial en la lucha contra el cambio climático. "A medida que nuestra casa común experimenta el impacto de la crisis medioambiental", señaló Caccia, "abordar la escasez de alimentos y agua es fundamental, especialmente para los más pobres y vulnerables del mundo. La tecnología nuclear también ha contribuido al desarrollo sostenible ayudando a la lucha contra el cáncer, mejorando el rendimiento de las cosechas, protegiendo los suministros de agua y monitoreando la contaminación de los océanos".

Reafirmando su compromiso con el Organismo Internacional de la Energía Atómica (OIEA), la Santa Sede insta a adoptar un enfoque integral, no tecnocrático ni excluyente, del uso de las tecnologías nucleares: que tenga en cuenta, de acuerdo con las recomendaciones del Papa Francisco, que todo está relacionado, desde el grito de la Tierra hasta el grito de los pobres... "La Tierra, nuestro hogar", señaló el arzobispo, "empieza a parecerse cada vez más a un inmenso montón de basura. Cada año se producen cientos de millones de toneladas de desechos, muchos de ellos no biodegradables, altamente tóxicos y radiactivos. A menudo no se toman medidas hasta que la salud de las personas se ha visto afectada de forma irreversible".

Sin embargo, los nuevos avances en materia de energía nuclear apuntan a la posibilidad de proporcionar una energía que no tenga un impacto negativo sobre el clima o la salud. La tarea de los Estados, sugiere el representante del Vaticano ante la ONU en Nueva York, es "restaurar los entornos afectados por los accidentes nucleares y la extracción de uranio, ayudar a las poblaciones afectadas, acordar soluciones de almacenamiento a largo plazo para los residuos radiactivos de alto nivel". La Santa Sede -concluye- "se congratula de la apertura del Banco del OIEA para el uranio poco enriquecido en Kazajistán y pide un mayor compromiso con la multilateralización del ciclo del combustible nuclear" para promover, en línea con el deseo expresado por Francisco, "un orden mundial basado en la unidad de la familia humana, fundado en el respeto, la cooperación, la solidaridad y la compasión" y para contrarrestar finalmente "la lógica del miedo con la ética de la responsabilidad".
