A big part of the holidays is enjoying festivities with family and friends. If we're honest, this can sometimes be draining. As you participate in these parties and get-togethers, make sure that you spend time with those people who bring you life. You know who those people are – friends and family that you can share your struggles and successes with, your go-to prayer partners, and the people that consistently point you to God's Word. Even if it's just a morning coffee date, make sure that you make space to chat and laugh together. These times will encourage your soul, help you in your walk with God, and promote a peaceful heart in this season. Spiritual preparation for Christmas happens as you reach out to the people who will encourage you in your walk with God.
